751a. " Objects of charity or any other public objects "—" In parish of F."—Valid.]—By her will made in 1889 testatrix bequeathed all her residuary estate to trustees upon trust to apply such parts thereof as were applicable by law for charitable legacies, in such manner as her trustees should, in their absolute discretion, think fit, " for the benefit of the schools, & charitable institutions, & poor, & other objects of charity, or any other public objects in the parish of F." : —Held : it was a good charitable gift of the whole residuary estate, & was not to be read disjunctively.—Re BENNETT, GIBSON v. A.-G., [1920] 1 Ch. 305 ; 89 L. 755a. "Hospital or other charitable or benevolent institution"—Valid.]—By his will, made in 1917, testator gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to apply the same & the income thereof in providing or endowing, or assisting in providing or endowing, any hospital wards, beds, or cots, or other like or similar objects, as his trustees should in their absolute discretion think fit, in memory of his late wife, "for, at, or in connection with, any hospital or convalescent home or other charitable or benevolent institution" ; & testator expressed the wish, but not so as to impose any legal obligation on his trustees, that such hospital or other charitable or benevolent institution should be in, or connected with, the parish of St. Marylebone, London, or at, or in connection with, the town of Kilmarnock :—Held : the word "hospital" where it was first used in the will was used in an adjectival sense, & applied to the following words "wards, beds, or cots" ; the primary intention of testator was to provide or endow the same, & the places where they could be provided or endowed must be hospitals or convalescent homes or other charitable institutions, & the words "benevolent institution" must be construed as ejusdem generis, with "hospital" ; & therefore the bequest constituted a good & valid charitable gift.—Re LUDLOW, BENCE-JONES v. A.-G. 769b. Gift for maintenance & upkeep of masonic temple—Residue to masonic charities—Whole gift void.]—By a codicil to his will testator directed his exors., on the death of his wife, to pay from his estate to the trustees of a masonic temple, erected by him to the memory of his son, £10,000, to be invested & the interest applied by the trustees, in their full & sole discretion, to the maintenance & upkeep of the masonic temple, & the balance, if any, to be applied in favour of any masonic charities which the trustees might select. The masonic temple was to be used for masonic ceremonies, & smaller rooms for lodge meetings, business & meetings of a social but not political character. Upon a summons to ascertain whether the legacy was valid or not :—Held : (1) the decisions in the "tomb cases" were inapplicable ; (2) the whole income of the fund being charged with a trust, at the discretion of the trustees, for a primary object which was invalid, the ct. was not entitled to control this discretion, & institute an inquiry at chambers as to the amount of income necessary to be applied for maintenance & upkeep of the temple, so that the gift of the balance would be valid ; (3) as the primary gift was not sufficiently defined, the whole legacy was void for uncertainty.—Re PORTER, PORTER v. PORTER, [1925] Ch. 746 ; 95 L. 823a. —— Description not confined to charitable purposes — Description having particular meaning in religious denomination to which testator belonged.]—In construing gifts of recent date, evidence is not admissible to show that words having a clear ordinary meaning were used in a special narrower sense.

Testator, a member of the "Brethren," or "Plymouth Brethren," by his will left all his property, subject to a life interest, to his widow, to be divided into two equal parts, one for his sons, & the other for his trustees "to distribute between the various good works which I & my wife have been in the habit of assisting. . . ." After the widow's death this summons was taken out to determine whether that direction created a good charitable trust. Affidavits were tendered to the effect that among the "Brethren" "good works" was a phrase in common use to indicate works distinctly religious, i.e. Christian, & suggesting that testator had used it in that sense :—Held : there was no evidence of the significance with which the testator had used the words, & the statement as to their use among the "Brethren" was not evidence of constant use in such a sense as would exclude non-religious charitable objects.—Re How, How v. How, [1930] 1 Ch. 66 ; 99 L. Testatrix died within three months of the execution of her will, & as the property consisted almost entirely of land, the charitable bequest failed. There was no parish priest of L. at the time of the death of testatrix, but all the duties of the office were being discharged by the curate of the parish :—Held : the curate was entitled to the ultimate residue bequeathed to the parish priest for his own use & benefit.—MCALLISTER v. STEWART, [1931] N. that amongst other conditions, which mainly related to the conduct of the services, it was made an " abiding condition " that the black gown should be worn in the pulpit, unless there should be an alteration in the law rendering it illegal. It further appeared that in compliance with the conditions a church had been erected at B. & the other conditions laid down by testatrix fulfilled, except the condition as to wearing a black gown, which condition was held by the judge to be a continuing condition, but not an illegal one; & accordingly, the fund was carried over to the credit of the action, the separate account of " the £1,500 endowment fund for the proposed B. church," with liberty for the incumbent & all persons interested to apply as to the capital or income thereof. This petition was presented by the present incumbent asking that under a scheme or otherwise the fund in ct. might be transferred to the Ecclesiastical Comrs. Evidence was adduced that the use of the black gown in the pulpit was practically unknown in the diocese of the new church, & that its use was calculated to alienate the congregation & to defeat the main objects of testatrix, namely, the teaching & practice of evangelical doctrine & services:—Held: the condition requiring the wearing of a black gown in the pulpit was subsidiary to the main charitable object, namely, the endowment of an evangelical church at B., & as the performance thereof had been shown to be impracticable the condition might be dispensed with & the fund be transferred to the Ecclesiastical Comrs. as part of the endowment of the church so erected as aforesaid.—Re ROBINSON, WRIGHT v. TUGWELL, [1923] 2 Ch. 332; 92 L. 1116a. Direction for accumulation—Discretion of trustees.]—The expression in a will of a wish that " the interest upon my investments may be allowed to accumulate . . ." followed by an indication of the charitable objects to which the accumulations are to be devoted does not bind the trustees of the will. But it is a directory provision; & the trustees ought to bear it in mind & generally to use their discretion so as to give effect to it.

A will, after certain bequests, including a bequest of residue in trust for " the Trustees of the S.M. Charities," expressed a wish of testator that " the income upon my investments may be allowed to accumulate for a period of twenty-one years or so long as the law will allow," & then set out various charitable objects in the town of S. which testator desired should thereafter benefit by such income only:—Held: the wish as to accumulation was not binding, but was in the circumstances a directory provision to which regard should be had in settling a scheme.—Re KNAPP, SPRECKLEY v. A.-G., [1929] 1 Ch. 341; 98 L. At the death of testatrix the hospital was almost entirely rebuilt, though not equipped. The directors did not at any time direct the rebuilding or equipment:—Held: (1) the exors. could not give directions for works already completed, but if they gave their assent to proposed works of which they had a general knowledge they might apply the legacy towards such works when properly executed; (2) "equipment" meant everything required to convert an empty building into a hospital; (3) no limit of time being fixed the discretion of the executors remained exercisable until the hospital was fully rebuilt & fully equipped.—Re UNITE, EDWARDS v. SMITH (1906), 75 L. p ii. —— Legatee uncertain.]—Testator, domiciled & dying in Ireland, bequeathed shares to "the Director of the African Mission." There was no society known as "the African Mission," & no individual with the official designation of "Director of the African Mission." There were, however, two societies which carried on missionary work in Africa, one of them being known in English as "The Society of African Missions," its principal officer being the "Provincial." The other Society possessed an Irish Mission to Africa of which the principal officer was the "Secretary," who was also described in a French publication of the Society as "Directeur." Testator had been on terms of intimacy with the latter officer, & had sent him a subscription, & in his letter enclosing the subscription he referred to "the needs of your great African Mission." Testator had also known the Provincial of the former Society, had discussed its work with him, was in regular receipt of its publication, called the "African Missioner," & had also contributed, although a much smaller amount, to its funds:—Held: the gift was a good charitable bequest for the propagation of the faith in Africa; & it should be referred to Chambers to settle a scheme, with the approval of the Attorney-General.—Re MULCAHY, BUTLER v. MEAGHER, [1931] I. 1424a. —— —— Alternative non-charitable gift.]—Testatrix by her will appointed an exor., & after giving various pecuniary legacies, including two for charitable purposes, & £100 to her exor., she left in blank the name of her residuary legatee. By a codicil testatrix desired that her residue should be "applied for charitable purposes as I may in writing direct, or to be retained by my exor. for such objects & such purposes as he may in his discretion select, & to be at his own disposal." She left no written directions as to the charities to be benefited:—Held: (1) no good charitable trust was declared, the exor. having a discretion to devote the residue to objects & purposes other than charitable; (2) the trust for those objects & purposes was too indefinite for the ct. to execute, & there being no direct gift to the exor., the added words "to be at his own disposal" were not sufficient to enable the ct. to hold that the exor. took the residue beneficially, & he held it as trustee for the next of kin.—Re CHAPMAN, HALES v. A.-G., [1922] 2 Ch. 479; 91 L. The congregation had seceded on a question of doctrine from the Synod of the United Original Secession Church. In 1878 the congregation, which had become reduced to fourteen individuals, ceased to worship together, & the trustees let the property & accumulated the rents. In 1912 the last of the trustees died & his testamentary trustees brought an action of multiplepoinding for the disposal of the property & the accumulations of rent:—Held: failing the establishment of a right to the property by any congregation of the United Original Seceders, the trust, being a trust for public purposes, fell to be administered cy-près.—ANDERSON'S TRUSTEES v. SCOTT, [1914] S. 27a. Assignment executed abroad—Of debt payable in England.]—C., being domiciled in Guatemala, deposited a sum of money with a bank in London. Subsequently he, being then in Guatemala, assigned in writing by way of gift the money so lying to his credit at the bank to N., who was also domiciled in Guatemala, & written notice of that assignment was given to the bank. It was not disputed that if the effect of that assignment had had to be decided by English law it would have been held good. By the law of Guatemala an assignment of money made without consideration is void, unless made by a document executed before a notary on stamped paper, & signed by both parties; & by the same law an infant cannot accept a voluntary assignment himself, it must be made to & accepted by a legal representative appointed by a judge on the infant's behalf. The assignment was on unstamped paper, was not executed before a notary, & was not signed by N. At the time of the assignment N. was an infant & no legal representative had been appointed. The money lying in the bank having been claimed both by the republic of Guatemala & by N. the bankers interpleaded. In an action to determine the issue between the two claimants:—Held: the validity of the assignment to N. must be determined by the law of Guatemala, & was therefore bad:

(Per BANKES, L.J.) upon the ground that, as the republic & N. were both domiciled & resident in Guatemala at the date of their respective assignments, & as the English depositary claimed no interest in the fund, the question which, if either, of the two claimants was entitled to it must be determined by the law of their domicil & residence, & not by that of this country;

(Per SCRUTTON & LAWRENCE, L.JJ.) upon the ground that the question of a person's capacity to take an assignment of personal property is to be governed either by the law of his domicil, or by that of the country where the assignment takes place, & that, as in this case the country of N.'s domicil & that of the assignment to him were the same, it was immaterial to inquire which, had they been different, ought to prevail; but from either point of view N. was incapable, by reason of his infancy, of receiving the donation;

(Per SCRUTTON, L.J.) on the further ground that by reason of non-compliance with the formalities relating to stamp, notary, etc., the assignment was, both by the law of the place where it was made, & by that of the domicil of the parties to it, not merely inadmissible in evidence but void;

(Per LAWRENCE, L.J.). As the contract of deposit was made in England, & the money was repayable in England where the bank was domiciled, & was recoverable in England, it was an English debt having a local situation in this country, & accordingly the validity of the assignment, as distinguished from that of a contract to assign, must be governed by the lex loci rei sitæ, & not by the law of the country where the assignor & assignee were domiciled, or where the assignment took place. Consequently if non-compliance with the required formalities had been the only objection he would have held the assignment good.—REPUBLICA DE GUATEMALA v. NUNEZ, [1927] 1 K. B. 669; 96 L. J. K. B. 441; 136 L. T. 743; 43 T. L. R. 187; 71 Sol. Jo. 35, C. A.

27b. —— Exercise of power of appointment over sum in England.]—An assignment, executed in a foreign jurisdiction by a person there domiciled, of a chose in action locally situate (so far as a chose in action can be) in England, is void if the assignment is void on grounds of substance according to the local law.

A document executed abroad in exercise of powers of appointment conferred by settlements executed in accordance with English law, & expressed to be intended to operate both as an assignment & as a will, may take effect as a conveyance inter vivos of the property of the person executing it.

Upon the marriage of testatrix, who was born in Italy, to an Italian, two settlements of property belonging to her, hereinafter respectively called the "A" settlement & the "B" settlement, were executed. The "A" settlement comprised proceeds of sale of English freeholds conveyed to the settlement trustees on trust for sale, & investments & other moneys, the whole fund being settled on trust to pay to the husband during the joint lives of himself & testatrix, £500 a year, & subject thereto to pay the annual income to testatrix for life without power of anticipation, &, after her death, to raise £50,000, as she should by deed or will appoint & pay the sum so raised to such persons as she should appoint. The "B" settlement comprised certain freeholds & certain moneys which were settled on trust to pay the income to testatrix for life, & after her death as she should appoint. Both were English in language & form, & the trustees were resident in the United Kingdom. By a deed of Dec. 10, 1906, to which her husband & the trustees of the "A" settlement were parties, testatrix appointed that the residue of the £50,000, which she then had power to appoint under the "A" settlement should be charged upon & raised out of the property subject to that settlement, &, after her death, should be held in trust for her absolutely as her separate estate. By a deed of May 23, 1912, between herself, her husband, & the "B" settlement trustees, testatrix appointed that, after her death, &, until then, subject to her life interest, the property comprised in the "B" settlement should be held by the trustees upon trust to pay sums which she or her husband should become liable to pay to them under certain covenants of indemnity in the deed, &, subject thereto in trust for testatrix, her heirs, administrators & assigns. Testatrix & her husband lived in Italy, & she was domiciled there at the date of her death. On July 28, 1927, being then domiciled in Italy, she executed an "appointment & assignment," expressed to be supplemental to the "A" settlement, the "B" settlement, & the deed of Dec. 10, 1906, & expressed also to be intended to operate as an assignment inter vivos & as a will. By it, she appointed & assigned the property comprised in those documents, subject to certain subsisting trusts, to the trustees of the appointment & assignment whom she appointed exors. upon trust for the payment of certain debts & legacies, & she gave the final residue to one of the trustees absolutely. After the death of testatrix leaving no other testamentary disposition, the deed of appointment & assignment was admitted to probate in the United Kingdom:—Held: (1) the deed of appointment & assignment so far as it purported to assign movable property was subject to the law of the country in which it had been executed & in which the testatrix was domiciled, i.e. to Italian law, & that, being null & void in Italian law, it did not effectually assign the remainder of the £50,000, appointed by the deed of Dec. 10, 1906; (2) the appointees of the sum of £50,000, were not persons entitled to immovable property. Their right, which was to require the trustees to pay the amount, was a chose in action in the nature of a movable; (3) the deed of appointment & assignment, as it was expressed to be intended to operate as an assignment as well as a will, could take effect as a conveyance inter vivos of the immovable property of testatrix situate in England.—Re ANZIANI, HERBERT v. CHRISTOPHERSON, [1930] 1 Ch. 407; 99 L. The lessor after receiving said notice & a copy of the garnishee summons assigned to pltf. all his claims & demands against the lessee for "debts or rentals now due or to become due" under the lease, & all his interest in the crops grown thereunder. 204b. -.]—Pltf., who had obtained judgment as first mtgee. against the proceeds of sale of a Latvian steamship, further claimed legal assignment to himself of the freight earned on the ship's last voyage. It was argued that by an agreement supplementary to the mtge. the mtgee. was given an equitable assignment, which by reason of notice to or knowledge possessed by the consignee or receiver of the cargo was converted into a legal assignment. The alleged notice consisted in the intervention by the mtgee. in an action by necessaries claimants who had arrested the ship, &/or in the terms of the mtgee.'s affidavit of interest filed in that action. The knowledge of the mtgee.'s claim was said to be proved by a letter written by the solrs. for the consignees or receivers of cargo. The material paragraphs of the supplementary agreement were as follows: "The mtgee. shall be at liberty so long as any moneys may be due under the said first mtge. & this agreement & he is hereby empowered in his own name or in the name of the shipowners . . . to demand, sue for, & receive & give receipt for all moneys due to the shipowners in connection with the said steamship & to institute such legal proceedings as he may think proper. . . ." "In relation to the matters dealt with herein, where they apply, the shipowners hereby appoint the mtgee. their attorney for them & in their name at any time during the currency of this security to collect, sue for, receive & give effective receipts for all freights . . . which may be or become due & owing to the shipowners. . . .":—Held: (1) by Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 136, a legal assignment must be absolute & express notice thereof must be given to the debtor; the constructive notice upon which the mtgee. relied was not sufficient to comply with the statute & the claim to a legal assignment of the freight failed; but there was in the supplementary agreement clear evidence of an equitable assignment of the freight to the mtgee.; (2) in a case where the mtgor. was a shipowner through whose default in business the whole trouble had been occasioned, & against whom judgments had been recovered, in default of appearance, by (inter alios) the interveners, it was not a necessary condition that the mtgor. should be joined in the mtgee.'s action.—THE ZIGURDS (No. 2), [1932] P. 113; 101 L. 204c. —— ——.]—Pltfs., while acting as agents for a foreign steamship in an English port, were asked to make disbursements & incur expenses on behalf of the vessel. Before doing so they obtained the following document, addressed to the receivers of cargo, which was signed by the master with the approval & consent of the managing owner of the ship: "Please pay the freight for my vessel, the Z., & all demurrage which may be payable under the charter, to my agents, E. A. Casper, Edgar & Co., Ltd., & oblige." On June 15, 1931, on an ex parte motion, LANGTON, J., gave judgment for pltfs.' claim for necessaries, & pronounced for the validity of an assignment to them of the freight & demurrage. At the reference to assess the amount of the claim the registrar, however, reported that the document was no more than an order to pay the freight & demurrage to pltfs., who, he said, had under it nothing in the nature of a right in rem against the freight. He, therefore, disallowed several items on the ground that they were not necessaries. Interveners, who as necessaries men were interested in the fund represented by the freight, moved to set aside the judgment of June 15, 1931, on the ground that the document was merely an ordinary agent's authority to collect the freight, & that even if it amounted to an equitable assignment the action must fail because the assignor was not joined as a pltf.:—Held: on the evidence of pltfs., combined with the document itself, there was an equitable assignment of the freight & demurrage to pltfs.; where the ct. was satisfied that there was no danger of fraud or harsh treatment of the assignor it could dispense with the presence of the assignor as a joint pltf.; & pltfs. could maintain their action in rem.—THE ZIGURDS (No. 3), [1932] P. 113; 101 L. J. P. 84; 48 T. L. R. 561.

204d. Amount recoverable by assignee limited.]—Deft. owed £285 to W., who owed money to pltf. bank, & W. assigned to the bank the debt owed to him by deft. The assignment, which was in writing, provided that "the amount recoverable under these presents shall not at any time exceed £150." Due notice of the assignment was given to deft. In an action upon the assignment:—Held: (1) the assignment was not an assignment of part only of the debt, but an absolute assignment of the whole debt with a proviso that if the bank recovered more than £150 they must hold the balance as trustees for the assignor, & it was a good legal assignment; (2) even if it was an assignment of part only of the debt it would still be a good equitable assignment, & pltfs. were entitled to recover.—BANK OF LIVERPOOL & MARTINS, LTD. v. HOLLAND (1926), 43 T. 601a. —— Assignment of debt payable in futuro.]—In 1918, C., a creditor of a firm, agreed to leave the sum constituting her debt on deposit with the firm for fifteen years from Jan. 1, 1917, upon the terms (inter alia) that interest & commission thereon should be paid to V. for his own use, & that in certain events, which subsequently happened, V. should receive a share of the firm's profits, which he in fact received during the years 1918–1921. In 1920, by C.'s direction, the debtor firm transferred C.'s debt by a book entry into the name of F., V. continuing to receive interest & commission as before, & on Feb. 24, 1926, F. made an equitable assignment of the debt to V. Notice of the assignment was given to the debtor firm on Mar. 2, 1926, whereupon the firm transferred the debt by a book entry into the name of V. At the date of the said equitable assignment by F., F. was under a liability to the debtor firm in respect of certain accommodation bills for which, as between F. & the firm, F. was liable, but such liability did not accrue due as a debt until after notice of assignment had been given, namely, when the debtor firm expended £15,000 in taking up the acceptances. On Mar. 15, 1926, the debtor firm presented their petition for a receiving order & were subsequently adjudicated bkpt. In a claim by V. to prove in the firm's bkpcy. :—Held : the assignment by F. to V. was subject to all rights of set-off which had accrued due on the part of the firm against F. at the date of the notice of assignment but was not subject to any right of set-off in respect of the £15,000 which had not accrued due at that date ; nor did the fact that the debt assigned was a debt payable in futuro, for which the assignor was not at the date of the notice of assignment in a position to sue, affect the general rule governing the assignment of a chose in action.—Re PINTO LEITE & NEPHEWS, Ex p. DES OLIVAES, [1929] 1 Ch. 221 ; 98 L. 607a. For breach of warranty by assignor—Against claim for instalments due under assigned agreement—Judgment obtained for damages for breach of warranty.]—The owner of a business sold it to deft. on terms of payment by instalments, & then assigned the benefit of the agreement to pltf. Before notice of assignment was given to deft., the latter obtained judgment against the assignor for damages for breach of warranty on the above sale. In an action by pltf., as assignee, against deft. for payment of instalments due under the assigned agreement, deft. claimed to set off the amount of the judgment. Pltf. contended that deft.'s right to damages in respect of the breach of warranty had merged in the judgment, & that the latter could not be set off against his claim :—Held : the set-off was valid.—LAWRENCE v. HAYES, [1927] 2 K. He was aware of the details of the charges preferred against him before attending the meeting, but, having attended as requested, & having failed in the opinion of the committee to justify his conduct, was suspended from membership. He took action against the club to have the suspension removed, & for damages, on the ground that the committee's decision, having been arrived at without affording him an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses against him, was contrary to the principles of natural justice :—Held : the committee was not bound by the formal rules of evidence, & the inquiry having been conducted in accordance with the club's rules & the decision of the committee arrived at in good faith, in pursuance of an honest desire to protect the interests of the institution, after resp. had been given every facility for presenting a defence, the suspension was not contrary to the principles of natural justice, notwithstanding that no opportunity was given to cross-examine the witnesses.—PERRY v. FEILDING CLUB, [1929] N. 53a. —— Claim by member for proportion of—On winding up of club.]—A limited co. was registered with the object of carrying on a proprietary club, & by the articles H. was appointed governing director for life & the management of the club was vested in her. In 1915 H. granted a lease of premises to the club which was carried on there. In 1918 a subscription of four guineas a year for country members & five guineas for town members was charged, & as from Jan. 1, 1919, an entrance fee of five guineas was imposed. From 1917 to Mar. 25, 1919, a notice stating that the club would be carried on permanently was exhibited by H. On Mar. 11, 1919, H., without notice to the executive committee, issued a writ for arrears of rent, & on recovering summary judgment closed the club. The co. then passed a resolution for voluntary winding up & a liquidator was appointed. A., who was a member of the club, claimed to prove as creditor for general damages & a proportion of her subscription for 1919, B., another member, claimed general damages, the return of her entrance fee & the proportion of her subscription for the current year:—Held: A. & B. were entitled to prove, not only for the proportion of their subscriptions of which they had lost the benefit for the current year, but also in respect of damages for the loss of the amenities of the club, & in the case of B. to a return of the entrance fee; & the damages should be assessed in the case of A. at £7, which included the proportion of her subscription for 1919, & in the case of B. at £14, which also included the entrance fee & proportion of her subscription.—Re CURZON SYNDICATE, LTD. 127a. Permitted hours on Sunday—Fixed number between specified hours—Discretion of club to alter limiting hours.]—Licensing Act, 1921 (c. 42), s. 2 (1), provides that "The hours during which intoxicating liquor may be sold or supplied on Sundays . . . in any . . . club . . . shall be as follows, that is to say, five hours, of which not more than two shall be between 12 noon & 3 in the afternoon, & not more than three between 6 & 10 in the evening. . . ."; & s. 2 (2) provides that "Subject to the foregoing provisions, the permitted hours on Sundays shall be such as may be fixed . . . in the case of a club in accordance with the rules of the club. . . ." In a golf club the permitted hours on Sundays were fixed by a rule of the club at five hours, namely, from 12 noon to 1.30 p.m., 2 p.m. to 2.30 p.m., & 4.30 p.m. to 7.30 p.m.; & pursuant to that rule a supply of intoxicating liquor was given to members of the club on a Sunday at 5 p.m.:—Held: on the true construction of above sect. the permitted hours on Sundays for a club were a period of not more than two hours, the whole of which should be between 12 & 3 p.m., & a period of not more than three hours, the whole of which should be between 6 & 10 p.m., & consequently that the supply in question was not authorised by the sect.—BROWN v. JOYCE, [1931] 1 K. 136a. —— Whether members' club is.]—The committee of management of a members' club installed in the club certain machines for the use of members only & for the purpose of giving additional pleasure to the members. The machines were operated by means of pennies inserted in a slot. The player, having first inserted a penny, depressed a handle, causing three cylinders to revolve on which were depicted bells, bars & fruits. On the cylinders ceasing to revolve the player either lost his penny or received winnings up to twenty pennies, according to the combination of fruits &/or bells &/or bars opposite a pointer. The machine automatically filled a jack pot from its winnings, & the pennies in the jack pot were returned to the player who obtained the combination of three bars. The machines were similar in type to other machines for the user of which persons had been convicted under the Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), where the persons had used the machines in shops or places of public entertainment or in proprietary clubs. Four members of the committee of management of the club in question were charged under Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), s. 4, for being persons having the care & management of certain premises, to wit, the club, which were then being used for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein. The contention of the members of the committee of management was that the position of a members' club was analogous to that of a private house, & that gaming upon the machines in a members' club was therefore not unlawful gaming :—Held : in order that a house should be a common gaming house within Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 2, it was not necessary that some person should be keeping the house for his gain, lucre or living ; it was sufficient that it was a house kept or used for playing at any game where the chances of the game being played therein are not alike favourable to all the players ; the chances of the game played on the machines in this club were not alike favourable to all the players, & the fact that the club was a members' club did not prevent the club premises being kept or used for the purpose of unlawful gaming being carried on therein, & therefore the members of the committee of management of the club could be convicted of the offence charged under s. 4 of the Gaming Houses Act, 1854 (c. 38), s. 4.—DANIELS v. PINKS, [1931] 1 K. Each fund, with its accretions of interest, was divided up periodically among the members ratably at a period of the year which differed in each branch. Syndicate in 1899 was granted by the Egyptian Govt. a concession for manufacturing & selling salt for Egypt from the Mex area, & the sole right to export salt from that area, but the Govt. reserved the right to abolish the salt monopoly at six months' notice. The syndicate then promoted applt. co., which agreed to purchase the rights of the syndicate under the Mex concession, but with the reservation that the co. should not do any export trade in salt, such right of export being reserved by the syndicate from the sale to the co. On Jan. 1, 1906, the Govt. abolished the salt monopoly of the syndicate. The memorandum of association of the applt. co. did not expressly prohibit the co. from exporting salt from Egypt, but stated that one of the objects of the co. was to ratify the agreement with the syndicate, & another object was to deal in salt & soda, & it was conceded that under its memorandum the co. could acquire salt deposits outside Egypt & there engage in the export of salt:—Held: the memorandum did not exclude from the permitted objects of the co. the export of salt from Egypt so as to prevent its engaging in that business.—EGYPTIAN SALT & SODA CO. v. PORT SAID SALT ASSOCN., [1931] A. 439a. "Issued" to the public—What amounts to.]—A co. being in want of further capital, a document was prepared by applt., who was the managing director, & signed by the other directors, stating the position of the co., that it was proposed to issue 20,000 preference shares, & giving an estimate of the profits after the new capital was available. Attached was an application form for preference shares. A second document was also prepared by the applt., written on the co.'s paper & addressed to a fellow director, marked "strictly private & confidential," which, after setting out the amount of nominal & issued capital, stated the purposes for which the additional capital was required, & concluded thus: "I shall be very happy to discuss this proposition in all its details with any one who is really interested." Attached was a form of application for ordinary shares. Several copies of these documents were given to applt.'s fellow director, who sent a copy to a solr., with a request, in substance, that he should find some client willing to provide the capital required. The solr. sent the documents to resp.'s brother-in-law, & he in turn sent them to resp., who, on the faith of the statements they contained, subscribed for 3,000 ordinary shares in the co. Subsequently ascertaining that a considerable part of the issued capital had been issued otherwise than for cash, a fact that was not stated in either of the documents, he sued applt. for damages for the loss he had sustained through the omission by applt. to comply with the requirements of 1908 Act, s. 81 (1) (c). At the trial the jury found that the two documents were an offer of shares by the co. to the public. In answer to the question, whether they were in fact issued to the public, the jury said: "There is no proof of this." The jury found that resp. sustained damage to the amount of £2,000 :—Held : the documents were not issued as a prospectus within 1908 Act, s. 81 (1) (c).—NASH v. LYNDE, [1929] A. C. 158; 98 L. 581a. —— —— Directors without knowledge that misrepresentation basis of contract.]—Deft. co. had no knowledge, that, so far as pltf. was concerned, his application had been induced by any representations made before the co. was incorporated. 581b. —— Contract between company & agent for undisclosed principal—Whether principal entitled to rescission.]—Shortly before the incorporation of a co. a draft prospectus, which was afterwards adopted by the co., was circulated for the purpose of obtaining underwriters of shares intended to be offered to the public by the proposed co. An investment co. entered into an underwriting agreement on Nov. 28, 1927, by which they agreed that they would within three days of the issue of the prospectus "either subscribe themselves . . . on the basis of the said prospectus for 1,164,000 . . . shares of 5*s* each or cause the same before the date aforesaid to be subscribed on the terms of the said prospectus by responsible persons," & any reasonable objection might be taken by the co. within two days to persons put forward by the investment co. On Nov. 29, 1927, M. & O. signed & remitted an offer to underwrite 12,000 shares addressed to the investment co. & also an application for the shares addressed to the proposed company, which was accompanied by a cheque for £600. On Dec. 12, 1927, the incorporation of the proposed co. took place, & the underwriting agreement & prospectus were adopted by the co. & the prospectus issued to the public. The public response was insufficient, & 8,160 shares were allotted to M. & O., the allotment letter bearing at the back a form of renunciation. M. & O. were agents for pltf., who had provided the £600. They renounced the shares in favour of pltf., who paid the further sum of £624 due on allotment & sent the allotment letter to the co., who replied stating that it had been duly registered in his name & placed his name on the register of shareholders:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to rescission, because (1) the contract between M. & O. & the co. was of such a class that M. & O. must be treated as the principals, so that pltf., as the undisclosed principal, could not sue on the contract or obtain its rescission, & (2) the contract constituted by the co.'s acceptance of pltf.'s authority under the renunciation to place his name on the register could not be treated as a contract entered into on the basis of the draft prospectus.—COLLINS v. ASSOCIATED GREYHOUND RACECOURSES, LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 1; 99 L. 582a. Misrepresentation by promoters.]—If a person is induced to take shares on the faith of a promise by the promoters of a co., which promise is not kept, he is a contributory. His remedy is only against the persons who made the promise.—Re UNITED KINGDOM SHIPOWNING CO., LTD., FELGATES CASE (1865), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 456; 11 L. T. 613; 11 Jur. N. S. 52; 13 W. R. 305; 46 E. R. 451, C. A.

614a. -.]—B. signed a printed form issued by the promoters of an intended co., expressing his willingness to become a member of the council of administration of the intended co. M. also wrote to the promoters promising to help the co. Soon afterwards the promoters issued a prospectus in which the co. was described as "to be incorporated under the Cos. Acts," & an extract was given from the proposed articles of assocn. to the effect that there would be a council of administration of members of the co., & a list of members of the council was appended containing the names of B. & M. In reliance on this prospectus, K. applied for shares in the intended co. On Jan. 31, three days after K.'s application, the co. was duly registered under the Cos. Act; & on Feb. 2, the directors allotted K. the shares which he had applied for, & approved a form of prospectus substantially the same as that which had been issued by the promoters. On Feb. 11, K. paid the allotment money on those shares. On June 26, K. discovered that B. & M. had both declined to take shares in the co. & to become members of the council of administration, & took out a summons to have his name removed from the list of shareholders:—Held: the effect of the statement in the prospectus was not merely that B. & M. had expressed their willingness to become members of the council of administration, but that they had authorised the publication of their names as members, & as such was a false statement of fact; the prospectus, although issued by the promoters before the formation of the co., was the basis of the contract between the co. & K. for the allotment of shares; that the misstatement in the prospectus was relied on by K., & was material to the contract, & consequently that K. was entitled to rescind the contract & repudiate the shares. The ct., being of opinion that there had been no laches or acquiescence, ordered K.'s name to be removed from the list of shareholders, & the money paid by him in application & allotment to be returned with interest at 4 per cent.—Re METROPOLITAN COAL CONSUMERS' ASSOCN.

770a. Acceptance of sum paid into court—Effect on liability under 1908 Act, s. 84.]—Resp. applied for & was allotted debenture stock in W., C., & Co., Ltd., relying upon the statements contained in a prospectus. The first-named applts. were directors in W., C., & Co., Ltd.; the second-named applts. carried on business as merchant bankers in the name of S. & Co., who were stated in the prospectus to have purchased the whole of the debenture stock of W., C., & Co., Ltd., but who were alleged by resp. to have issued the prospectus as agents for the other applts. Resp. by his writ claimed "damages for false & fraudulent misrepresentation against all applts., & against such of applts. as were directors of W., C., & Co., Ltd., compensation under 1908 Act, s. 84, alternatively damages for conspiracy to defraud, the damages claimed in respect of the three claims being £178." The trial judge dismissed the action against the first-named applts. with costs. The action then proceeded against the second-named applts. until they amended their defence by leave & paid £130 into ct. with a denial of liability, which amount the resp. accepted in lieu of the £178 claimed, in full satisfaction of the cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentation. The Ct. of Appeal set aside the orders & judgment of the trial judge & ordered a new trial of the action as regards the causes of action under 1908 Act, s. 84, & conspiracy to defraud :—Held : (1) both on the issue of conspiracy to defraud & the issue of deceit, after the money had been taken out in satisfaction there was no cause of action & no head of damage remained unsatisfied of which there was any evidence or which could be ordered to be tried anew; (2) on the question of compensation under 1908 Act, s. 84, although the case should have been left to the jury there was nothing left to be tried after resp. had taken out in satisfaction money paid in on the issue of conspiracy only. Compensation was not, either as to the amount recoverable or the mode of measuring it something different from or even greater than damages. —CLARK v. URQUHART, STRACEY v. URQUHART, [1930] A. the prospectus by the ct. was not confined to a sale under a certain option of purchase referred to later in the prospectus, but included a sale to anybody whomsoever, the Trust would set aside out of the proceeds of sale a sum sufficient to redeem all the notes then outstanding, & the holders would be given an option of being then paid off in cash at 105 per cent. or of retaining their notes till the date of drawing. Each of the notes, which was in the form of the specimen note referred to in the prospectus, provided that the Trust would, as & when the principal sum of £100 became payable in accordance with the conditions indorsed thereon, pay to pltf. the sum of £105, & was expressed to be subject to & with the benefit of those conditions, which repeated the provisions contained in the prospectus for the redemption of the notes by drawings & the option retained by the Trust to pay off the notes on notice, but did not refer to the promise by the Trust contained in the prospectus as to earlier payments in the event of the sale of the Trust's R. B. estates. The option to purchase referred to in the prospectus having lapsed & the Trust having contracted to sell the R. B. estates without having given notice to pltf. that his option to be paid off or to retain his notes had thereby become exercisable, & the Trust having repudiated their liability to perform their promise contained in the prospectus, pltf. brought an action to have the said liability of the Trust established & for an injunction to restrain them from dealing with the proceeds of sale without in the first place setting aside a sum sufficient to pay off the outstanding notes:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the relief claimed on either of two grounds, namely, (1) that the entire contract was contained in two written instruments, namely, the deposit notes & the prospectus, the terms of which the ct. could reconcile by construing the promise in the prospectus as if it were inserted in the note as a proviso to come into operation, if & when the R. B. estates were sold, or (2) that the promise was a binding collateral contract, the consideration for which was the contract by pltf. to take up the notes, & that, as the terms of that promise & an animus contrahendi on the part of pltf. & the Trust had been clearly proved, the test laid down by LORD MOULTON in *Heilbut, Symons & Co. v. 834a i. Order under 1929 Act, s. 56 (3)—What amounts to special circumstances.]—In a petition at the instance of a shipping co. for confirmation of a reduction of capital, it appeared that the co. had no debentures or debenture stock, that the co.'s only debts, consisted of expenditure incurred by its ships in the course of their voyages, the amount of which would not be ascertained till their return; that such debts were, in practice, regularly discharged as soon as their amount had been ascertained; & that the value of the co.'s ships was ample security for its outstanding debts. On a motion for an order in terms of Cos. Act, 1929, s. 56 (3), the ct. directed that the provisions of Cos. 100 shares, but the transfer did not specify the denoting numbers of the shares comprised therein. At a meeting of the directors held on Apr. 16, a resolution was passed purporting to allot all the shares of the co. At that date the co. had not issued a prospectus or filed a statement in lieu thereof. On Apr. 20, the statement in lieu of prospectus was filed. At a meeting of the directors held on Apr. 30, the transfer from Y. to K. came before the board, & a resolution was passed approving the transfer & directing that a share certificate should be forwarded to K. Subsequently K. was registered a member of the co. The certificate, dated May 26, was sent to, & was accepted by, K. On June 8 a bonus, declared at the meeting of Apr. 30, was paid to, & was accepted by, K. K., as purporting to be the owner of the shares, attended a meeting of shareholders on Mar. 24, 1921. Subsequently the co. went into liquidation, & K., on whose shares there was a liability of 10*s.* per share, then denied being a shareholder, contending that the allotment of shares to Y. was void under 1908 Act, s. 82 :—Held : (1) although the allotment to Y. was void, K. was a member of the co. at the commencement of the winding up, there having been no agreement between him & the co. until Apr. 30, when the co. was legally in a position to allot shares ; (2) in any event, in view of his subsequent conduct, he was estopped from denying that he was a member of the co.—Re BURTON (JAMES) & SONS, LTD., [1927] 2 Ch. 132 ; 96 L. 1928, was accepted by W. as security for the payment of the debt & on the faith of which W. abstained from serving the writ upon the A. co. until June 18, 1928. D. was also managing director & G. was also secretary of pltf. co. The certificate bore the seal of that co., & was attested by the signatures of D. & G. as such director & secretary respectively. Pltf. co. having refused to recognise W.'s title to the shares brought this action against W., in which they claimed a declaration that W. was not entitled to the shares & rectification of their register of members. By art. 105 of the arts. of assocn. of pltf. co. it was provided as follows: "The seal of the co. shall not be affixed, except by the authority of a resolution of the board of directors & in the presence of at least one director & the secretary; & the said one director & the secretary shall sign every instrument to which the seal shall be so affixed in their presence & in favour of any purchaser or person bonâ fide dealing with the co. such signature shall be conclusive of the fact that the seal has been properly affixed." The following further facts were held to have been established at the trial: from entries in the register of members it appeared that the shares in dispute had in Nov. 1927, been issued, with other shares, to the English & Foreign Investment Trust, Ltd., & that in respect of those shares three shillings per share were paid up. There was no entry showing when that co. ceased to be a member. There were entries in the register indicating that the 2,000 shares were transferred to W., & that W. was entered on the register as a member on Apr. 30, 1928, as having acquired the shares as fully paid & as having had a certificate No. 528 issued to him. There was no record of any transfer from the English & Foreign Investment Trust, Ltd. In Apr. 1928, while the register & seal of pltf. co. were under their physical control, D. & G. made the entries in the register, &, as director & secretary respectively of pltf. co., affixed the seal of that co. to & signed the certificate issued to W., but without any authority from pltf. co. & fraudulently in the interest of the A. co.:—Held: (1) the certificate not having in truth been sealed by pltf. co.'s authority, was, in the circumstances aforesaid, a forgery & not binding upon the co; (2) W., whose ignorance of art. 105 had been proved, was, on that account, precluded from relying on that article to support the contention that pltf. co. was bound in his favour to treat the attesting signatures as conclusive evidence of the fact that the seal of pltf. co. had been properly affixed to the certificate; (3) as affixing the seal was not a matter in which normally a single director would have power to act without the authority of the board of directors, W. was not relieved from the obligation to inquire whether the formalities required by the art. had been complied with.—SOUTH LONDON GREYHOUND RACECOURSES, LTD. v. WAKE, [1931] 1 Ch. 496; 100 L. The pltf., who was a beneficiary under the settlement, was, in his individual capacity, indebted to the co. & the co. had, under its articles, a lien upon shares in respect of the debts of a member. In a previous action it had been held that whatever equitable interest the co. had in these shares under its lien was postponed to the interests of the beneficiaries under the settlement, other than the debtor-trustee & persons claiming under him. Defts. now contended that, as the co. would lose its lien, which was admittedly good against the debtor-trustee & persons claiming under him, if the trustees were to sell, the trustees were not in a position to sell the shares free from encumbrances, & therefore the defts. were not bound to carry out their agreement to purchase:—Held: the right of the trustees to sell the shares in execution of their trust was not affected by the co.'s lien against the debtor-trustee's personal interest, & the trustees could give an unencumbered title to a purchaser of the shares, although the co. would lose its lien thereby. Defts. were, therefore, bound to carry out their agreement to purchase.—MATHIESON v. GRONOW (1929), 141 L. T. 553; 45 T. L. R. 604.

2224a. —— Dividend before exercise of option to purchase—Payment postponed.]—By a contract made in Apr. 1922, it was agreed between the persons interested therein that a business forming part of a testator's estate should be converted into a private co. with a capital of £30,000, divided into £20,000 debentures bearing interest at 7 per cent. & 10,000 ordinary shares of £1 each, fully paid, which were to be allotted to the trustees of the will. One of the trustees, F., was appointed manager of the co., & was given the option, so long as he continued to be both trustee & manager, of purchasing the whole of the debentures & shares at par value In June, 1928, the co. declared a dividend of 57½ per cent. on the ordinary shares for the year ending Mar. 31, 1928, to be paid in three equal instalments on July 1 & Nov. 1, 1928, & Feb. 1, 1929, & the first instalment was paid on July 1, 1928. On July 30, 1928, F. exercised his option to purchase the whole of the shares & debentures for £30,000. At that date there was four months' interest due upon the debentures. The purchase was completed on Nov. 5, 1928. On a summons being taken out to determine the rights of the parties in the unpaid instalments of the dividend, & the debenture interest, as between vendors & purchaser:—Held: (1) the four months' accrued interest on the debentures passed to the purchaser; (2) the declaration of the dividend on the shares having created a debt to the trustees as the then registered shareholders, the postponement of the payment did not operate to deprive them of their rights, & therefore the remaining instalments belonged to them & not to the purchaser.—Re KIDNER, KIDNER v. KIDNER, [1929] 2 Ch. 121; 98 L. An action was commenced against the chairman of the board of directors & the co. in which the pltfs. claimed that he held the shares as trustee for the individual shareholders & in which they sought an injunction restraining him from voting, at any meeting of the co., as the holder of the shares :—Held : (1) on the evidence, the chairman of the board of directors held the shares, not for the benefit of the individual shareholders, but for the benefit of the co., & that he held them on trust, at his discretion, to sell them ; (2) the transfer did not offend against any principle laid down by any of the decided cases, & that the transaction was not made invalid by reason of the transfer having been made to a nominee on trusts which involved an obligation on the trustee to vote in respect of the shares as the co. might from time to time direct.—KIRBY v. WILKINS, [1929] 2 Ch. 444 ; 142 L. 2585a. Article restricting right of transfer—Construction.]—Arts. of assocn. restricting transfer of shares must be so construed as not unreasonably to prevent shareholders from fairly & reasonably exercising their powers as members of the co.

Testator appointed his wife, a son, & two other persons exors. & trustees of his will, whereby he bequeathed his residuary estate to the trustees on trust to sell & convert & to hold the proceeds, after the wife's death, upon trust as to one-third thereof for the said son, & as to the remaining two-thirds for the other children of testator alive at testator's death. The residue included shares in the co., some in testator's name, the remainder in the name of another as his nominee or as trustee for him. The will was proved by the widow & the son only. They caused these shares to be registered in their own names without qualification, as the arts. of the co. disqualified transferees from receiving notice of or voting at meetings. Later they appointed an additional trustee of the will; & in order to vest the shares jointly in them & him, all three executed a transfer. This was presented to the co. for registration, but registration was refused on the ground that the restrictions on transfer imposed by the articles applied :—Held : the transfer could be justified under the arts.—Re HOBSON, HOUGHTON & Co., [1929] 1 Ch. 300; 98 L. 2585b. —— —— Right to transfer to another member of company.— Certain shareholders in a private co. commenced an action to restrain certain members of the co. from transferring shares otherwise than in accordance with the arts. of assocn. The substantial question, which came before the ct. upon motion, was whether one member was entitled, under the articles, to transfer shares to another member. The material articles were as follows :—

Art. 5 : "The directors may in their absolute & uncontrolled discretion refuse to register any proposed transfer of shares, & clause 20 of Table A shall be modified accordingly. No shares shall in any circumstances be transferred to any infant, bkpt., or person of unsound mind. Save as hereby otherwise provided, no share shall be transferred to any person who is not a member of the co. so long as any member or failing such member any person selected by the directors is willing to purchase the same at the fair value which shall be determined as hereinafter provided." Art. 6 : "In order to ascertain whether any member or person selected as aforesaid is willing to purchase a share at the fair value, the person whether a member of the co. or not proposing to transfer the same, hereinafter called 'the retiring member,' shall give notice in writing, hereinafter described as a 'sale notice,' to the co. that he desires to sell the same, & until otherwise determined by the co. in general meeting the same shall be offered among the holders of ordinary shares in proportion as near as may be to their existing holdings thereof and any not accepted by them shall be offered to such other persons as the directors shall determine. Such notice shall constitute the co. the agent of the retiring member for the sale of such shares to any member of the co. or a person selected as aforesaid at the fair value. 2589a. What amounts to "issue" of shares Finance Act, 1927 (c. 10), s. 55.]—In connection with a scheme for the reconstruction of a company a new co. was formed to enter into a sale agreement to acquire the undertaking of the existing co. The consideration for the agreement was to consist, in addition to the discharge by the new co. of certain liabilities of the old co. of the allotment of shares in the new co. to the shareholders in the old co. Letters of allotment were sent to these shareholders, accompanied by a form of renunciation. Before the original allottees were registered some of them renounced in favour of other persons, with the result that of the first registered shareholders in the new co. those who had been shareholders in the old co. held less than 90 per cent. of the shares in the new co. The question of the stamp duty payable on the sale agreement & other documents was submitted for adjudication, the co. contending that the sending of the letters of allotment constituted an "issue" of shares to the original allottees, & that the conditions of exemption from ad valorem duty laid down in the Finance Act, 1927

Special art. 20 empowered the directors to appoint any other "qualified person" either to fill a casual vacancy or as an addition to the board. At a full board meeting on Saturday, Nov. 14, transfers of shares to two outsiders were duly passed for registration, after which the transferees were forthwith elected directors. The transfers were registered on the following Monday:—Held: though before their appointment the transferees had acquired an absolute right to registration, they were not "qualified persons" before actual registration, & their appointment as directors was invalid.

The larger the business carried on by the co. the more numerous & the more important the matters that must of necessity be left to the managers, the accountants, & the rest of the staff.

(2) In ascertaining the duties of a director of a co., it is necessary to consider the nature of the co.'s business & the manner in which the work of the co. is, reasonably in the circumstances & consistently with the arts. of assocn., distributed between the directors & the other officials of the co.

(3) In discharging those duties, a director (a) must act honestly, & (b) must exercise such degree of skill & diligence as would amount to the reasonable care which an ordinary man might be expected to take, in the circumstances, on his own behalf. But, (c) he need not exhibit in the performance of his duties a greater degree of skill than may reasonably be expected from a person of his knowledge & experience; in other words, he is not liable for mere errors of judgment; (d) he is not bound to give continuous attention to the affairs of his co.; his duties are of an intermittent nature to be performed at periodical board meetings, & at meetings of any committee to which he is appointed, & though not bound to attend all such meetings he ought to attend them when reasonably able to do so; & (e) in respect of all duties which, having regard to the exigencies of business & the arts. of assocn., may properly be left to some other official, he is, in the absence of grounds for suspicion, justified in trusting that official to perform such duties honestly.

(4) A director who signs a cheque that appears to be drawn for a legitimate purpose is not responsible for seeing that the money is in fact required for that purpose, or that it is subsequently applied for that purpose, assuming, of course, that the cheque comes before him for signature in the regular way, having regard to the usual practice of the co. A director must of necessity trust to the officials of the co. to perform properly & honestly the duties allocated to them.

Before any director signs a cheque, or parts with a cheque signed by him, he should satisfy himself that a resolution has been passed by the board, or committee of the board, as the case may be, authorising the signature of the cheque; & where a cheque has to be signed between meetings, he should obtain the confirmation of the board subsequently to his signature.

The authority given by the board or committee should not be for the signing of numerous cheques to an aggregate amount, but a proper list of the individual cheques, mentioning the payee & the amount of each, should be read out at the board or committee meeting & subsequently transcribed into the minutes of the meeting.

(5) It is the duty of each director to see that the co.'s moneys are from time to time in a proper state of investment, except so far as the arts. of assocn. may justify him in delegating that duty to others.

(6) Before presenting their annual report & balance sheet to their shareholders, & before recommending a dividend, directors should have a complete & detailed list of the co.'s assets & investments prepared for their own use & information, & ought not to be satisfied as to the value of their co.'s assets merely by the assurance of their chairman, however apparently distinguished & honourable, nor with the expression of the belief of their auditors, however competent & trustworthy.

safe custody of the securities of the co. It would be impracticable, on every purchase of securities, for actual delivery thereof to be made to the directors, or, on every sale, for the delivery to the brokers of the securities sold to await a meeting of the board or of a committee of directors. The duty of seeing that the securities are in safe custody must of necessity be left to some official of the co. in daily attendance at the office of the co., such as the manager, accountant, or secretary.

(8) A co.'s stockbrokers, however respectable & responsible they may be, are not proper persons to have the custody of its securities except on such occasions when, for short periods, securities must of necessity be left with them; but immediately such necessity ceases the securities should be lodged in the co.'s strong room or with its bank, or placed in other proper & usual safe keeping.

(9) A director is not responsible for declaring a dividend unwisely. He is liable if he pays it out of capital, but the onus of proving that he has done so lies upon the liquidator who alleges it.

Art. 150 of the co.'s arts. of assocn. provided (inter alia) that none of the directors, auditors, secretary or other officers for the time being of the co. should be answerable for any loss, misfortune, or damage which might happen in the execution of their respective offices or trusts, or in relation thereto, unless the same should happen by or through their own wilful neglect or default respectively:—Held: (10) an act, or an omission to do an act, is wilful where the person who acts, or omits to act, knows what he is doing & intends to do what he is doing, but if that act or omission amounts to a breach of that person's duty, & therefore to negligence, he is not guilty of wilful neglect or default unless he knows that he is committing, & intends to commit, a breach of his duty, or is recklessly careless in the sense of not caring whether his act or omission is or is not a breach of his duty; (11) the immunity afforded by art. 150 was one of the terms upon which the directors held office in the co., & availed them as much on a misfeasance summons by the Official Receiver under 1908 Act, s. 215, as it would have done in an action by the co. against them for negligence; (12) upon the evidence & in accordance with the principles enunciated above, none of the resp. directors, other than the managing director, was liable.

(13) The measure of the auditor's responsibility depends upon the terms of his engagement. There may be a special contract defining the duties & liabilities of the auditors. If there is, then that contract governs the question. The arts. will, however, be looked at if there is no special agreement, because the auditors will presumably have taken their duties upon the terms, among others, set out in the arts. That is not to say that auditors can set aside a statutory obligation. No agreement or art. of assocn. can remove an imperative or statutory duty.

(14) Sect. 113 does not lay down a rigid code. The duty imposed on the auditors by it is not absolute, but depends upon the information given & explanations furnished to them, so that there is abundant scope for discretion. Art. 150 is not in conflict with the sect. The onus lies upon the auditors, who would not be excused for total omission to comply with any of the requirements of the sect., or for any consequences of deliberate or reckless indifferent failure to ask for information on matters which call for further explanation.

(15) An auditor is not justified in omitting to make personal inspection of securities that are in the custody of a person or co. with whom it is not proper that they should be left, whenever such personal inspection is practicable.

(16) When an auditor discovers that securities of the co. are not in proper custody, it is his duty to require that the matter be put right at once, or, if his requirement is not complied with, to report the fact to the shareholders, & this whether he can or cannot make a personal inspection.

Auditors should not be content with a certificate that securities are in the possession of a particular co., firm, or person unless the co., etc., is trustworthy, or, as it is sometimes put, respectable, & further is one that in the ordinary course of business keeps securities for its customers. In all these cases the auditor must use his judgment.

Where the auditors did not personally inspect the securities of the co. in the hands of the stockbrokers of the co., & accepted from time to time the certificate of the brokers that they held large blocks of such securities, & did not either insist upon those securities being put in proper custody or report the matter to the shareholders:—Held: (17) they committed a breach of duty, but, inasmuch as throughout the audit the auditors honestly & carefully discharged what they conceived to be the whole of their duty to the co., such negligence was not wilful, & art. 150 applied to exonerate them from liability.

Where the auditors after a full investigation in which they were misled & deceived, & their reports to the board suppressed, by the chairman of the co., (a) described large sums of money left in the hands of the co.'s stockbrokers & lent to the general manager of the co. as "Loans at call or short notice," "Loans" or "Cash at hand & in bank"; (b) failed to discover that the co.'s stockbrokers, in order to reduce their indebtedness to the co. for the purposes of the audit, made purchases, on behalf of the co., immediately before the close of the co.'s financial year, of Treasury Bills which in fact never came into the possession of the co. & were sold immediately the new financial year had opened:—Held: (18) they were not guilty of any breach of duty as auditors.

(19) Sect. 215 is a procedure sect. only & creates no new or additional liability.—Re City Equitable Fire Insurance Co., Ltd., [1925] 1 Ch. 407; 94 L. J. Ch. 445; 133 L. T. 520; 40 T. L. R. 853; [1925] B. & C. R. 109, C. A.

After an order for the compulsory winding up of the co. appct. put in a proof for £950 in respect of directors' fees. The liquidator rejected the proof to the extent of £350, allowing only £600 on the ground that all directors' fees which had accrued due more than six years before the date of the winding-up order were barred by Stat. Limitations. The directors' fees due to appct. appeared from balance sheets duly signed by two directors & passed by the co. Upon a summons taken out by appct. asking that the decision of the liquidator rejecting his proof to the extent of £350 might be reversed, & that the proof might be allowed in the full sum of £950 :—Held : (1) a board of directors, acting as a board, & passing a resolution adopting a balance-sheet which includes directors' fees, does not bind the co. to pay those fees ; (2) a balance-sheet so adopted & signed by directors pursuant to Cos. 3157a. —— Presumption of authority.]—Pltfs. were a firm of fruit brokers. Defts. & the P. Co. were two cos. engaged in the fruit trade. M. was a director of both cos. By art. 28 of the arts. of deft. co. the directors were empowered to "delegate any of the powers for the time being vested in the directors." The arts. also incorporated Table A. M. purported to make on behalf of defts. an agreement with pltfs. that in consideration of pltfs. advancing a sum of money to the P. Co., pltfs. should have the right to sell on commission all the fruit imported both by defts. & the P. Co., & that pltfs. should be entitled to retain the proceeds of sale of defts.' fruit as well as of that of the P. Co. as security for the advance. M. had no authority from defts. to make such a contract. Pltfs. requiring confirmation of the agreement by deft. co., the secretary of defts. wrote a letter purporting to confirm the agreement on behalf of defts., & pltfs., treating that as a sufficient confirmation, made the advance. The secretary had no authority to give such confirmation. Defts. subsequently repudiated the agreement as made without their authority. At the time that they made the advance pltfs. had no knowledge of the terms of defts.' arts. or that they incorporated Table A:—Held: whether the agreement was to be treated as having been made by M. as an ordinary "director" of deft. co., or by the secretary as "agent," or by the two combined, pltfs. were not entitled to assume that any authority to make it had been delegated to them by the board, because (1) although a person who contracts with an individual director or servants of a co., knowing that the board of directors has power to delegate its authority to such an individual, may in certain circumstances assume that power of delegation has been exercised & that he may safely deal with the individual in question as representing the co., he cannot rely on the supposed exercise of such power if he did not know of the existence of the power at the time that he made the contract; (2) there was something so unusual in an agreement to apply the money of one co. in payment of the debt of another that pltfs. were put upon inquiry to ascertain whether the person or persons making the contract had any authority in fact to make it; (3) even if pltfs. had known of the existence of the express power of delegation, they would not have been entitled to assume that it had been exercised in favour of M. or the secretary to any greater extent than was to be inferred from the positions which M. & the secretary respectively occupied or were held out by the co. as occupying.—HOUGHTON & Co. v. NOTHARD, LOWE & WILLS, [1927] 1 K. By an agreement between the two cos., the prices which the C. co. was to collect from customers upon sales, as well as the rates at which they were to remit when so collected, were fixed, the difference in favour of the C. co. constituting their remuneration for services to be rendered. Pltf. a shareholder & director of both cos. brought this action on behalf of himself & all other shareholders of the two cos. against the two cos. & four individual defts., who were shareholders directors & officers of both cos. to compel the individual defts. to pay back into the treasury or either or both cos. sums alleged to have been improperly paid to them by the cos. in 1927, 1928, & 1929. These sums were paid to the individual defts. for "promotion expenses" :—Held : in so far as the action rested upon the contention that the moneys paid by the brewing co. to the C. co. were improperly paid, it failed for the reason that pltf. himself received & still retained a portion of those moneys, & was not therefore in a position to complain either individually, or as a shareholder of the brewing co.—SHIESEL v. KIRSH, [1931] 1 D. Before the expiration of that period the co. passed a resolution, which was assented to by pltf., for the voluntary winding up of the co. on the ground that by reason of its liabilities it could not continue its business. Pltf. thereupon brought an action claiming damages for repudiation of the agreement:—Held: a term could not be implied in the agreement that if the co. should be wound up voluntarily & pltf. should vote for that course being adopted, his employment should cease so as to disentitle him to damages for breach of the agreement. 3500a. Power to provide for employees—Grant of pension.]—A private co., the articles of which authorised the directors to provide for the welfare of employees & their widows & children, entered into a deed of covenant by which it granted a pension of £500 a year to the widow of a former managing director five years after his death. Some three years later the co. passed a resolution for voluntary winding-up. The widow lodged a proof in the winding-up for the capitalised value of the annuity, but the liquidator rejected it :—Held : the transaction was not one for the benefit of the co. or reasonably incidental to the co.'s business. The pension did not come within the terms of the co.'s articles, as a managing or other director is not a person in the employment of a co., & the action of the directors was not confirmed by the shareholders in general meeting convened for the purpose of doing so. 3560a. Remuneration by commission—Amount recoverable—How calculated.]—Applt., pltf. in the action, was for many years secretary of resp. co. Originally he received a fixed salary per week, but in 1916 an agreement was made between him & one A. S., managing director of resp. co., to the effect that in addition to his weekly salary he was to receive 10 per cent. on the balance of profits after payment of 12½ per cent. dividend. In 1926 applt. quarrelled with A. S. & left the service of resps., & shortly afterwards he brought this action for an account of the sums due to him as commission & for payment of the amount found to be due. It appeared that nearly all the capital of the resp. co. was held by A. S. & his family, & that he, as managing director, had entire control of the co.'s business. During applt.'s tenure of office A. S., with the connivance & assistance of applt., habitually appropriated funds of the co. to his own purposes. Applt. in framing his claim for commission contended (i) that the 12½ per cent. dividend referred to in the agreement must be a dividend subject to income-tax; (ii) that the 12½ per cent. dividend must be limited to an amount representing 12½ per cent. on the capital of the co. at the date of the agreement & had no application to subsequent increases of capital; & (iii) that for the purpose of calculating his commission he was entitled to reintroduce into the accounts all the sums which had been unlawfully applied for the benefit of A. S. personally :—Held : (1) the 12½ per cent. dividend must be a dividend subject to income-tax; the 12½ per cent. dividend must be measured on the capital as it stood in each year when the accounts were made up; & in reckoning the amount on which commission must be paid no account could be taken of the sums which ought to have been included in the profits but had been misappropriated by A. S.; (2) although applt. had been guilty of misconduct in relation to the affairs of resps., he was entitled to recover moneys which were already due to him for work done on resps.' behalf, & the remedy of resps. was an action or counterclaim for damages for breach of duty.—RAMSDEN v. SHARRATT (DAVID) & SONS, LTD. In an action by a director against the co. & its directors, in which he claimed a declaration that a notice purporting to remove him from the office of director was invalid, the question arose whether Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), s. 1 (1), which provides that words in the singular shall include the plural & words in the plural shall include the singular, applied to the special articles which were used with Table A :—Held : sect. 1 (1), which governed Table A, also governed the special articles which were used with Table A, &, applying this principle to the notice in question, pltf. was validly removed from his office of director & the action failed.—FELL v. DERBY LEATHER CO., LTD., [1931] 2 Ch. 252 ; 100 L. 3661 i. General rule.]—Persons who continue from year to year to assume the duties of auditors must be held to have agreed to conduct their work in a reasonably skilful & careful manner. In an action in which defts. auditors were held liable in damages for negligence in not detecting defalcations by the pltf.'s accountant, it was held that there was ample justification for the belief of pltf.'s shareholders that the report pltf. was receiving annually from defts. provided for such an audit as would reasonably catch such thefts & manipulations of the books as said employee had been guilty of. Defts. were not justified in taking directions from another employee, the manager, whom also they were required to check, as to whether it was necessary to do certain work of checking. Since defts. were aware that pltf.'s system of checking was faulty & that the danger of theft was always present, the default of pltf., or of its employees other than the accused in not remedying that situation did not excuse the continuing negligence of defts. The fact that pltf. had received from bonding cos. the greater part of the loss it had sustained was not a defence to the action. Any possible issue arising from such payment might be left to be determined between pltf. & said cos. on defts. making payment, or, alternatively, if defts. so required, the form of judgment might provide for notice to any parties, such as the bonding cos., presumed to have an interest therein.—INTERNATIONAL LABORATORIES, LTD. v. DEWAR, [1932] 3 W. 3679 i. Misfeasance—Failure to audit.]—Held : the failure to audit & report on the balance sheets of a co., & the sending of summaries purporting to be audited to the registrar of cos. were wilful acts or defaults on the part of the auditor, & he was liable to make good certain sums paid as preference dividends as a result of such default.—Re FULTON (JOHN) & CO., LTD., [1932] 1 R. 35.—IR.

(inter alios) dissenting. The alteration struck out the words " three shares for every 250 lb. of butter fat " supplied by a member & substituted " one share for every 60 lb. of butter-fat." Applt. was called upon to take up additional shares in accordance with the alteration, but refused to do so :—Held : the art. was not one that could be amended under Cos. Act, 1908, s. 122, so as to force additional shares on a dissenting member, & applt. was not bound by the alteration objected to.—MACDONALD v. NORMANBY CO-OPERATIVE DAIRY FACTORY CO., LTD., [1923] N. 3698 i. Alteration a breach of contract.]—A shareholder in a co. must be taken to know that one of the incidents of membership of a co. is that the co. may, by adopting the proper method, bonâ fide alter its articles in a way which may prejudicially affect his interest, & provided that the alteration in the article is not inconsistent with the objects set out in the memorandum of association, & is bonâ fide made in the interest of the co., the shareholder would be bound by such an alteration.

3704a. Interference by court.]—It is for the shareholders, & not for the ct., to say whether an alteration of the articles is for the benefit of the co., provided that it is not of such a character as that no reasonable men could so regard it.

The arts. of assocn. of a co. provided that pltf. & four others should be the first directors of the co., & that they should be permanent directors, & that each of them should be entitled to hold office so long as he should live unless he should become disqualified from any one of six specified events. Owing to irregularities in the accounts furnished by pltf. of sums received by him on the co.'s account an extraordinary general meeting of the co. was held & a special resolution was passed that the articles should be altered by adding a seventh event disqualifying a director, namely, a request in writing by all his co-directors that he should resign his office. Such a request was subsequently made to the pltf. There was no evidence of bad faith on the part of the shareholders. In an action by pltf. for breach of an alleged contract contained in the original articles that he should be a permanent director, & for a declaration that he was still a director of the co. :—Held : the contract, if any, between pltf. & the co. contained in the articles in their original form was subject to the statutory power of alteration & that if the alteration was bonâ fide for the benefit of the co. it was valid & there was no breach of that contract ; there was no ground for saying that the alteration could not reasonably be considered for the benefit of the co. ; therefore, there being no evidence of bad faith, there was no ground for questioning the decision of the shareholders that the alteration was for the benefit of the co. ; &, consequently, pltf. was not entitled to the relief claimed.—SHUTTLEWORTH v. COX BROTHERS & CO. 3734a. —— Preference shareholders whose dividends " in arrear."]—A co.'s articles of assocn. provided that the original preference shares, carrying a cumulative preferential dividend of 7 per cent., should not confer upon the holders the right to attend & vote at any general meeting or to have notice thereof unless (inter alia) the dividend thereon was " in arrear " for more than three months. Subsequently the capital of the co. was increased by the issue of preferred ordinary shares with the right to a non-cumulative preferential dividend of 10 per cent. payable in respect of each year exclusively out of the profits earned in each year & to rank after the preference shares. It was further provided that the holders of these preferred ordinary shares should, mutatis mutandis, be subject to the same restrictions as to receiving notices of & attending & voting at general meetings as the holders of original preference shares. Since 1920 no profits had been available to pay dividends, & for the general meeting of 1926 the holders of preferred ordinary shares received no summonses. In an action by holders of such shares against the co. for a declaration that they were entitled to have notice of & to attend & vote at the general meetings :—Held : the words " in arrear," in the context in which they appeared in the articles, could not be construed to cover the non-payment of a non-cumulative preference dividend payable out of the profits of each year & not paid because there were no profits available for the dividend, & the action failed.—COULSON v. AUSTIN MOTOR CO., LTD. Deft. co. had its head office & board of directors in Australia, but had also a register of shares in London. Deft. co. having been assessed to Australian income tax was required by the Deputy Federal Comr. of Taxation, to deduct an amount sufficient to pay the income tax from the dividend payable to the English trust investment co., as being an "absentee" taxpayer for the year ending June 30, 1921. The investment co. sued deft. co. for the amount deducted, & contended that such dividends were not assessable to Australian income tax :—Held : the shares held by pltf. co. in deft. co., were locally situate in England, & the dividend due in respect of them was an English debt. The Commonwealth Govt. had therefore no power to impose or alter the incidence of taxation upon the dividend, & the deft. co. was not entitled to deduct any Australian income tax from any dividend payable to English shareholders.—LONDON & SOUTH AMERICAN INVESTMENT TRUST, LTD. v. BRITISH TOBACCO CO. 3943a. —— —— —— —.]—A co. was incorporated as a trust investment co., the objects as defined by clause 3 of its memorandum of assocn. including (a) to acquire & hold stocks, shares & securities of the classes therein specified & from time to time to change such investments for others of the like nature, & (b) to borrow on debenture stock & to redeem or pay off any moneys so borrowed. The business & accounts of the co. were conducted & kept, as required by the articles of assocn., on the footing that profit or loss on a change of investment was carried to capital account, & net receipts over expenditure were carried to revenue account & became available for payment of dividends without regard to any depreciation in the market value of the co.'s investments. In 1900 the co. issued at par debenture stock. In 1918, owing to the general fall in the value of securities, the directors were enabled to redeem some of this debenture stock at a discount, & they claimed the right to carry the whole amount of this discount to revenue account. The investments forming the assets of the co. had fallen to an extent approximately equivalent to the discount at which the debenture stock had been redeemed :—Held : (1) apart from the special provisions of the articles of assocn., the single item of gain by redemption of debenture stock could not be dissociated from the loss of capital assets, & that the amount of the discount was not distributable as dividend ; (2) the issue of loan capital was not one of the objects or part of the business of the co., but was a power to be exercised incidentally to, & in furtherance of, its objects, & even if the discount was otherwise divisible as net profit, such a division would be prohibited by the fact that it did not arise out of the co.'s business.—WALL v. LONDON & PROVINCIAL TRUST, LTD., [1920] 2 Ch. 582 ; 90 L. 3958 ii. —— —— —— —.]—Deft. co. was created by letters patent under Dominion Cos. Act, R. S. C., 1906. Its capital was divided into preferred & common shares & the letters patent provided that the preferred shares "shall confer the right to receive out of the profits of each year a preferential dividend for such year at the rate of eight per centum per annum on the capital for the time being paid up thereon & shall rank as regards return of capital in priority to the common shares, but shall not confer the right to any further participation in profit or assets." The by-laws of the co. provided that the directors might before declaring any dividend set aside out of profits such sums as they should think proper as a reserve. Pltf., the owner of both preference & common shares, sought a declaration that the co. had earned profits during certain specified years sufficient to pay said preferred dividends & that it was bound to apply such profits in payment thereof & had no discretion to apply them in providing for a reserve fund or contingencies :—Held : whether or not profits had been shown out of which the preferred dividend could be paid, the discretion of the directors to withhold the declaration of a dividend had not been taken away by the letters patent.—DEVALL v. WAINWRIGHT GAS CO., LTD., [1932] 1 W. 5 per cent. per annum & for any balance of profits being applied for the benefit of a garden city or its inhabitants. Art. 129 of the arts. of assocn. provided that, subject to the rights of holders of debentures & preference shares, the net profits of the co., after providing for a reserve fund & for depreciation, "shall be divided by way of dividend among the members in proportion to the amount paid on the ordinary shares held by them respectively, but so that the dividends upon the ordinary shares for any year shall not exceed the aggregate rate of 5 per cent. per annum. The surplus of the net profits of the co. after payment of such dividends & the amount necessary to make up dividends for past years to the rate of 5 per cent. per annum shall be applied" for the benefit of the town or its inhabitants as therein mentioned. The co. from time to time over a number of years issued ordinary shares. From 1904 to 1917 no dividend was paid on the ordinary shares, & it was only since 1923 that a full dividend of 5 per cent. had been paid. There were now profits available for payment of arrears of dividend, after payment of the dividend for the current year, but not sufficient to pay the whole of the arrears:—Held: the fund available should be distributed ratably among the shareholders according to the respective amounts of the arrears of dividend payable on the shares held by them respectively.—FIRST GARDEN CITY v. BONHAM-CARTER, [1928] Ch. 53; 97 L. 4094a. —].—(1) A question might arise under the 38th clause of the deed, as to whether what the directors are there authorised to do under their general powers must not be done by them at a Board; & it appears to me that it would not be competent to any one, two, or even three directors, by putting their signature to an instrument, to enter into a contract for the society; for, by the 38th section, the contract must be executed at a Board.

(2) I do not think it at all an unreasonable requisition on the part of joint stock cos., that every instrument required in their transactions should be under their common seal. The 44th section of the Act makes such a requisition of the utmost importance; for, according to that section, every contract entered into by an instrument not under their common seal would be unilateral as regards them—a contract under which they would be liable, but of which they could not claim the benefit against those with whom it was entered into.

(3) There is, no doubt, an important distinction to be drawn, & it is drawn in the case of Royal British Bank v. Turquand, No. 4094, ante, between that which, upon the face of it, is manifestly imperfect when tested by the requirements of the deed of settlement of the co., & that which contains nothing to indicate that those requirements have not been complied with. Thus, where the deed requires certain instruments to be under the common seal of the co., every person contracting with the co. can see at once whether that requisition is complied with, & he is bound to do so; but where, as in the case I have last referred to, the conditions required by the deed consist of certain internal arrangements of the co. for instance resolutions at meetings, & the like, if the party contracting with the directors find the acts which they undertake to do to be within the scope of their powers under the deed, he has a right to assume that all such conditions have been complied with. In the case last supposed, he is not bound to inquire whether the resolutions have been duly passed, or the like, otherwise he would be bound to go further back, & to inquire whether the meetings have been duly summoned, & to ascertain a variety of other matters, into which if it were necessary to make such inquiry, it would be impossible for the co. to carry on the business for which it is formed.—Re ATHENÆUM LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, Ex p. EAGLE INSURANCE CO. 4267a. ——— ———.]—Two rival companies, the N. Co. & the W. Co., formed resp. co. to take over certain branches of their business of fruit importers, the shares of the new co. being equally divided between the two old cos., & the board consisting of two directors of the N. Co., namely, M. & G. Lowe, & two directors of the W. Co. By a brokerage agreement embodied in a letter dated in July, 1924, between M. Lowe & applts., a firm of fruit brokers, it was arranged that applts. should make certain advances to the N. co. & should receive all fruit consigned either to the N. co. or to resp. co. & keep back 70 per cent. of the net proceeds in reduction of the advances, & it was stipulated that resp. co. should subscribe to this arrangement. Applts. also obtained a guarantee of the loan from the two Lowes & a third director of the N. Co., who was also the secretary of resp. co. This arrangement was not ratified by any agreement under the seal of resp. co., but the secretary wrote to applts. purporting to confirm the arrangement on behalf of his co. The directors of resp. co., other than the two Lowes, first became aware of the arrangement after it had been in operation for some months. & it was then put an end to. Applts. had obtained fruit consigned to resp. co. on board several ships without production of the bills of lading, on giving an indemnity to the ships, & they sued resp. co. for delivery of the bills of lading. Resps. counterclaimed for the proceeds of fruit belonging to them & not accounted for :—Held : (1) the arrangement contained in the agreement of July was not authorised by resp. co. ; (2) resp. co. were not estopped from denying the existence of the arrangement by the knowledge of the Lowes, inasmuch as they were parties to the wrong done to the co., or by the omission of the other directors to inspect the accounts of the co., which would have disclosed the arrangement.—HOUGHTON (J. The notes were made in general accordance with the authority of the president under the by-law of the co., & it was not necessary for applt. bank to inquire into the authority of the president to sign the notes on behalf of the co. Under sect. 106*d* of the Dominion Cos. Act, the president had to be one of the directors ; &, under sect. 37, the only persons who could make notes on behalf of the co. would be those designated in the by-law. Persons dealing with a co. are presumed to have notice of what is contained in the Act under which the co. was incorporated & the Letters Patent ; &, in a case like the present, where the Act refers specifically to the by-laws as the place where the authority of an officer or an agent to sign promissory notes is to be found, the person taking a note made by an officer is under obligation to ascertain from the by-laws that the officer who signed the note might have been authorised to make such note in the course of the co.'s business ; but he is not obliged to go further & inquire whether the directors passed the resolution which would give the officer express authority. That constitutes part of the co.'s " indoor management." If the officer might, under the by-laws, have been authorised to make the note, the making of it was within his ostensible powers & was " in general accordance with his powers as such under the by-laws."—Re ALMUR FUR TRADING CO., BANK OF UNITED STATES v. ROSS, [1932] S. Among its objects were the formation of a guarantee fund; the receipt of subscriptions thereto from persons, whether members of the co. or not, for the purpose of carrying out its objects & defraying its expenses; & the assignation of the letters of guarantee to any corporation which might give it credit. The co. obtained an undertaking from a firm, which was not one of its members, to pay a proportion of any loss arising in connection with the holding of the exhibition. It subsequently assigned the undertaking to a bank which had given it credit. A loss having occurred, the bank sued the firm upon the guarantee. The defenders contended that the assignation was ultra vires, having been made at a time when the co. was not in liquidation:—Held: the assignation was valid, in respect that the guarantee fund was not capital of the co. within the meaning of sects. 2 & 4 (1) (v) of 1908 Act, which could only come under the control of the co. or its directors in the event of liquidation, but formed an independent fund of credit to which an assignee could make good his right on the happening of the event on which the guarantee was contingent.—Lloyds Bank, Ltd. v. Morrison & Son, [1927] S. Effect of section—Redemption of debenture—Remedies of liquidator.]—A co., which had become insolvent, issued to a trustee, as security for some of their debts, a debenture which was to rank as a first charge on the co.'s assets & as a floating security only. Subsequently the co. sold the goodwill of its business, & out of the proceeds paid to the trustee the amount required to discharge the debenture. Within three months from the issue of the debenture a different creditor of the co. obtained a winding-up order. The liquidator took out a summons to set aside the charge created by the debenture & to recover the money paid under it:—Held: though under 1908 Act, s. 212, the charge was invalid, the amount paid could not be recovered on the summons, but it would be open to the liquidator either to apply to set aside the payment as a fraudulent preference within sect. 210, or to question the validity of the debenture on any other ground.—Re PARKES GARAGE (SWADLINCOTE), LTD., [1929] 1 Ch. 139; 98 L. Fifty-four days elapsed after the first advance & five days after the last advance before the issue of the debentures on Jan. 20, 1926. The delay in the issue of the debentures was not acquiesced in by the lenders, who when they sent cheques for the advances wrote that the money was in further payment on account of debentures to be issued as arranged. The co. went into liquidation on Jan. 25, 1926. During the period in which the bulk of the advances were made the lenders were unaware that the co. was on the verge of liquidation. The debentures were issued when the co. was unable to pay its debts:—Held: the debentures were valid, the payments being made "at the time of" the creation of the charge & in consideration for the charge within 1908 Act, s. 212, & consequently the debentures were not a fraudulent preference within 1908 Act, s. 210.—Re STANTON (F. & E.), LTD., [1929] 1 Ch. 180; 98 L. sr. "Cash paid."]—Deft. co. was owned by S., who was its managing director. In Feb. 1930, he obtained a loan of £300 from pltfs. for his co. on the security of his own promissory note & also of deft. co.'s debenture for £300, which should have been registered within 21 days, viz., on or before Mar. 13, 1930. As S. was endeavouring to effect a flotation of his co. as a public co., he requested pltfs. not to register the debenture until the last moment, which they agreed to do. On Mar. 13, S. asked for further time, & it was ultimately agreed that in lieu of such registration pltfs. should advance S. £400 on the security of a new promissory note & a debenture for that amount, out of which sum he should forthwith repay the £300 previously borrowed with interest thereon. This was intended to give S. the additional time he required without prejudicing pltfs.' security. In pursuance of this arrangement pltfs. gave S. their own cheque for £400. W., who acted as solr. to both parties, attended with S. at the bank on Mar. 15, when the cheque was presented for payment, & when the latter received the £400 he immediately in pursuance of the agreement handed to W. the sum of £310 in payment of principal & interest on foot of the first loan, which sum the latter immediately lodged to the credit of pltf. co. The debenture for £400 was duly registered. The contemplated flotation did not materialise & the deft. co. went into voluntary liquidation:—Held: under Cos. (Consolidation) Act, 1908, s. 212, the mtge. debenture for £400 was invalid except to the extent of £90, the nett amount received by deft. co. on foot of the promissory note & debenture for £400, with interest thereon at 5 per cent.—REVERE TRUST, LTD. v. WELLINGTON HANDKERCHIEF WORKS, LTD., [1931] N. 4730a. —— Floating charge over part of assets already charged.]—Where a debenture trust deed, creating a general floating charge over all the undertaking & assets of the co. both present & future, reserves power to the co. in the ordinary course of its business to create specific charges over any of those assets, then although a second general floating charge over all the property comprised in the first charge but ranking pari passu with or in priority to that charge, is, under the general law, incompatible with the first charge & ranks subject to it, yet there is no principle of law which forbids the creation of a second floating charge over part only of those assets ranking pari passu with, or in priority to, the earlier floating charge, so long as the later floating charge is within the limits of the power reserved.

A debenture trust deed created a general floating charge over all its undertaking & assets both present & future, but reserved to the co. power to create in priority to that charge such mtges. or charges as the co. should think proper "by the deposit of any dock warrants, bills of lading, or other similar commercial documents, or upon any raw materials, or finished or partly finished products & stock for the purpose of raising money in the ordinary course of the business of the co." In pursuance of the power & in the course & for the purposes of its business, the co. raised £12,000 & secured payment thereof by charging all the before-mentioned documents, materials & stock, both present & future, by way of a floating security to rank in priority to the floating charge created by the trust deed:—Held: the power reserved to the co., except as to subject-matter & purpose, was unlimited; it enabled the co. to choose the form of a floating charge, if required, & the second charge was valid & entitled to priority over the first charge.—Re AUTOMATIC BOTTLE MAKERS, OSBORNE v. AUTOMATIC BOTTLE MAKERS, [1926] Ch. 412; 95 L. 4739a. —— ——.]—By a lump sum building contract entered into in 1922 between S. & Co., the contractors, & defts., provision was made for interim payments on the architect's certificates, to be given monthly at the rate of 90 per cent. of the value of all work executed. The remaining 10 per cent., the retention moneys, was to be retained & deposited in a bank until the final adjustment of accounts. The contract was varied by consent, & in the events which happened the retention moneys amounted to £1,000 at the beginning of 1924; this was never deposited in a bank & remained a merely notional fund, but both parties treated it as a separate sum capable of being earmarked. It was included, without distinction, in the architect's final certificate for £1,848 10*s.* 2*d.* on Jan. 28, 1927. Meanwhile, pltfs., who were supplying cement to the contractors, found that the latter were getting into arrears with their payments, & to obtain further credit the contractors, being then indebted to pltfs. in the sum of £671 on Apr. 7, 1924, assigned to them the retention moneys by a document in these terms: "In reduction of the amount now or to be owing from us to you for goods supplied by you, we hereby assign to you all moneys now or hereafter to become due to us from the H.R.D.C. for retention moneys in respect of the G. Housing Scheme, & for which your receipt shall be a sufficient discharge. . . ." Of that assignment due notice was given by pltfs. to defts. next day. The contractors had at various dates between 1900 & Feb. 2, 1924, issued to the Manchester & County Bank, Ltd., a number of debentures charging the undertaking of the contractors & all their property, both present & future, the charge being a specific charge on the contractors' freehold & leasehold property, machinery, goodwill, & uncalled capital, & a floating charge on all the co.'s other assets, subject to a proviso that the contractors were not to be at liberty to create any mtge. or charge for any of their assets in priority to the debentures. On Oct. 13, 1924, a receiver for the debenture-holders was appointed, who duly entered into possession. On Oct. 20, 1924, a resolution was passed for the voluntary winding-up of the co. The receiver refused to recognise the right of pltfs. to payment under their assignment in priority to the debenture-holders, & on the architect's final certificate being given, in Jan. 1927, defts. declined to interplead & paid the retention moneys to the receiver for the debenture holders, & pltfs. thereupon brought their action upon their assignment:—Held: (1) the debentures only created a floating charge on the retention moneys, which the contractors could therefore assign or charge in spite of the clause in the debentures prohibiting the creation of charges in priority to the debentures; (2) pltfs. had no express notice of that clause in the debentures; (3) though the registration of the debentures affect pltfs. with constructive notice that debentures existed, it did not affect them with notice of the terms, including the limitation on prior charges, of those debentures.—EARLE (G. & T.), LTD. v. HEMSWORTH RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 44 T. A scheme for reconstruction of the co. provided for the mtge. bonds being exchanged for income bonds subject to an issue of first income bonds ; also that a committee, one only of whom was to be appointed by the mtge. bondholders, should have power to modify the scheme without confirmation by the bondholders. The scheme was sanctioned by the majority of the bondholders requisite under the trust deed. The required majority would not have been obtained but for the vote of the holder of a large number of bonds, whose support of the scheme was obtained by the promise of a large block of ordinary stock, an arrangement which was not mentioned in the scheme :—Held : the resolution was invalid, both because the bondholder in voting had not treated the interest of the whole class of bondholders as the dominant consideration, & because the scheme, so far as it provided for a committee, was ultra vires.—BRITISH AMERICA NICKEL CORPN. v. O'BRIEN, [1927] A. —— —— Due registration — Particulars of property charged insufficiently entered.]—A co. with the object of securing payment of its overdraft at pltf. bank "demised" to the bank a certain leasehold factory with all the movable "plant used in or about the premises" for a term of about 996 years. The bank sent the indenture to the registrar of companies for registration under 1098 Act, s. 93. In the particulars required to be filed pursuant to that sect. the instrument was described as a mtge. of the leasehold premises, no mention being made of the chattels. The registrar entered the description of the instrument in the register in similar terms, identifying it by its date, & omitting all mention of any charge on the chattels. Subsequently the sheriff, in execution of a judgment recovered by deft. against the co., seized certain chattels of the co. upon the mortgaged premises, including certain motor vans. The bank claimed the goods in question under their mtge., & obtained from the registrar a certificate "that a mtge. or charge dated "—specifying the date & the parties to the instrument—"was registered pursuant to Cos. Act, s. 93." On an interpleader issue to try the title of the bank as against the execution creditor :—Held : as the certificate identified the instrument of charge, & stated that the mtge. or charge thereby created had been duly registered, it must be understood as certifying the due registration of all the charges created by the instrument, including that of the chattels, & it was conclusive evidence of the due registration of the chattels none the less because the register in omitting to mention them was not merely defective but misleading.—NATIONAL PROVINCIAL & UNION BANK OF ENGLAND v. CHARNLEY, [1924] 1 K. 4944a. Assignment of goods to discount company—Financing hire-purchase agreements.]—A co. carried on a furniture business largely by means of hire-purchase agreements, & in order to provide the capital for the purpose entered into a series of agreements with a discount co. by which they assigned to a discount co. the goods comprised in the hire-purchase agreements subject to & with the benefit of the hire-purchase agreements on an immediate payment of 75 per cent. of the total purchase price, which was the same as that payable by the hirer if he continued payments of hire long enough to become the purchaser. From that 75 per cent. there was, however, deducted a percentage called the finance charge, which represented the discount co.'s profit. The balance of 25 per cent. of the purchase price was retained by the vendor co. out of the payments made by the hirer, 75 per cent. of such payments being secured collaterally to the discount co. by the issue of a series of bills of exchange which were equal in number to the instalments payable by the hirer & which were accepted by the vendors. The agreements with the discount co. provided that no notice thereof was to be given to the hirer, so long as there was no breach of the hire-purchase agreement. The vendor did not pass beyond the co.'s control, so as to create an obligation against the co. upon it, until delivery by the co.'s agents in the United Kingdom to the lender.—CANADA PERMANENT MORTGAGE CORPN. v. I. Before completion.]—Where, in a debenture-holders' action, the receiver contracts to sell property included in the debentures, subject to the contract being approved & sanctioned by the ct. & no date is fixed for obtaining such approval, it must be obtained before the date fixed for completion of the contract.

On Oct. 31, 1927, the receiver in a debenture-holders' action entered into a conditional contract to sell land & cottages included in the debentures. The contract provided that the purchase should be completed on or before Dec. 31, 1927. By clause 14 it was provided that the contract was subject to its being approved & sanctioned by the ct., & in the event of its not being so approved it was to become void, & the purchasers were to be entitled to be repaid their deposit. The receiver took no effective steps to obtain the sanction of the ct., & on Jan. 10, 1928, the purchasers' solrs. wrote to the debenture-holders' solrs. repudiating the contract & demanding the return of the deposit money under clause 14. 5120a. Conduct of action—To whom given—Independent party—When desirable.]—The conduct of a debenture holder's action begun by a person whose transactions with the co. the ct. considers to require investigation, or whose interests are shown to be adverse to those of the remaining debenture holders, may be given by the ct. to an independent party.

One of the objects of the co. was to buy & let premises for use as flats & clubs. Its first directors were pltf. & his nominee, but it was in substance a "one man" co. with pltf. as managing director. It granted leases of certain premises to the S. syndicate, of which the directors were pltf. & the same nominee. The co. agreed to pay a yearly salary to pltf. & guaranteed the issue of debentures by the syndicate. The syndicate soon failed to pay rent, but pltf. took no steps either to enforce payment or forfeit the leases: &, although the co. was carrying on business at a loss, he bought a quantity of furniture with its money on its behalf. The syndicate issued debentures, pltf. becoming the holder of a number of them, & also holding debentures issued by the co. Later, a receiver & manager of the property of the syndicate charged by the debentures was appointed, & pltf. began a debenture holder's action against the co., subsequently selling the furniture which he had bought & the leasehold premises at a loss. Ultimately, he resigned his directorship: & this summons asked that the conduct of the proceedings should be vested in appct., another debenture holder, on the ground that pltf. against whom gross negligence was alleged, had an interest adverse to that of the remaining debenture holders:—Held: as the transactions of pltf. with the co. had never been investigated, & as it had so far been impossible to investigate them, it was desirable that the conduct of the action should be given to an independent person.—Re SERVICES CLUB ESTATE SYNDICATE, LTD., MCCANDLISH v. THE COMPANY, [1930] 1 Ch. 78; 99 L. 5184b. ——— To enforce rights under Landlord & Tenant Act, 1927 (c. 36), s. 5.]—A co. was the lessee of certain premises under a lease expiring on June 24, 1930. In 1925 the co. issued a debenture by which it charged all its undertaking & all its property, present & future, including its uncalled capital in favour of the debenture holders. On Apr. 22, 1929, the co. gave notice to the landlords under above sect., requiring them to grant to it a new lease of the premises. In July, 1929, the debenture holders in exercise of the power on that behalf in the debenture appointed a receiver of the property & assets therein comprised. The landlords having failed to comply with the co.'s request for the grant of a new lease the receiver on Sept. 23, 1929, commenced an action in the county court in the name of the co. to obtain the grant of a new lease. On Oct. 15 a compulsory order was made to wind up the co. & a liquidator was appointed: —Held: the right to apply for a renewal of the lease under above sect. was a right given by the co. to the debenture holders as part of their security, & the receiver was entitled to enforce that right notwithstanding the liquidation of the co.—GOUGH'S GARAGES, LTD. v. PUGSLEY, [1930] 1 K. sg. Leave to appeal from order—When granted.]—Winding-up Act, 1927, s. 103, applies to an application for leave to appeal from an order allowing or dismissing a petition to wind up a co. Leave to appeal should not be granted, however, unless there appears to be some reason for doubting the validity of the judgment in review. "Future rights" in sub-sect. (a) of said sect. 103 should be given a wide interpretation; & the question to be raised on the intended appeal from an order dismissing a winding-up petition may involve future rights although the applicant for leave to appeal is merely a shareholder & not a creditor.—Re CANADA NATIONAL FIRE INSURANCE CO., [1930] 3 W. q i. —— Exceptional circumstances.]—A creditor of a co. presented a petition for the winding up of the co. by the ct. The co. had gone into voluntary liquidation, & the petition was opposed on the ground that the majority of the creditors desired the voluntary winding up to be continued. A statement of the co.'s affairs showed that its liabilities amounted to £335,000, while its assets were estimated at £9,300; that about £116,000, stated to be irrecoverable, had been advanced to directors of the co.; & that the co. had received large advances from associated cos., part of which were completely secured. Creditors to the extent of £300,000, including one whose claim amounted to about two-thirds of the co.'s whole indebtedness, had assented to the voluntary winding up, & petitioner, who was a creditor to the extent of £5,000 only, was the sole creditor who objected to the co. being wound up voluntarily:—Held: although as a general rule the co. would have regard to the wishes of a majority of creditors, the circumstances were of such a special character that an exception to the general rule should be made, & a winding-up order pronounced.—BOUBOULIS v. MANN, MACNEAL & CO., LTD., [1926] S. 5959b. Duty of liquidator of private company.]—The question arose in this case whether resp. had shown through a private co. a title under which he had become the assign of leasehold premises within sect. 95 of St. John's Municipal Act, 1921, & as such entitled on the expiration of the term granted by the lease to compensation for the unexhausted value of improvements made during the term. Resp.'s title was faulty & certain transactions under which he traced his title from the private co. irregular, but he was held by the Supreme Ct. to be an assign, a private co. not being regarded as a corpn. distinct from the persons composing it & irregularities in connection with its liquidation being regarded as permissible :—Held : the duties & responsibilities of the liquidator of a private co. are as serious as of any other co., & a private co. is distinct from the persons composing it; a liquidator of a private co. was therefore not justified in paying the creditors merely a dividend on their debts when large surplus assets remained in hand, & in then allowing the contributories without any deed of assignment to take possession for themselves of the surplus assets, & for the future in Newfoundland such irregularities should be without judicial countenance. Resp. had not established his claim to be legal assign of the property, having regard to such irregularities.—DITCHAM v. MILLER (1931), 100 L. J. P. C. 177; [1931] B. & C. R. 86, P. C.

5959c. Application for leave—What court will consider—Effect on interested parties.]—(1) Where the liquidator of a co. applies for leave to disclaim leasehold property of the co., the ct., in exercising its discretion, may take into consideration the effect of the disclaimer on interested parties.

The liquidator of a co. holding a lease applied for liberty to disclaim the lease. The lessors, who were relying on certain guarantors for the payment of the rent & performance of the covenants, opposed the application, on which the registrar made no order save as to payment of costs. On a motion before the ct. by way of appeal :—Held : as the lessors, who were entitled to appear, would suffer substantial injury if the disclaimer were allowed, the ct., in the exercise of its discretion, would not allow it.

6293a. —— Excess of liability of contributories—Right to refund.]—An insurance co., the bulk of the shares of which were only partly paid up, was ordered to be wound up by the ct. These shares being held at the date of winding-up by another co., also in liquidation & insolvent, the liquidator of the insurance co. made two calls, the first of 1*s.* a share in 1925, & the second, described as a " final call," of 1*s.* 6*d.* a share in 1927, on the B. contributories who held the shares before they had been transferred to the insolvent co. The proceeds of these calls, together with the other assets of the co., were insufficient to pay all its creditors in full, but, apart from the other assets, exceeded by some £10,000 the total amount of the debts & liabilities of the co. contracted at the date when the B. contributories ceased to be members of the co. :—Held : the surplus did not form part of the assets of the co., but must be refunded to the B. contributories. The call must first be enforced against all B. contributories who had not paid it, so as to produce equality of contribution & distribution.—Re City of London Insurance Co., Ltd., [1932] 1 Ch. 226 ; 101 L. 6394a. —— ——.]—The society, under a loan stock trust deed, issued loan stock bearing interest at 7 per cent. with a quinquennial bonus of 2½ per cent. Under the trust deed, entered into by the society with trustees for the stockholders, an amount equal to 7½ per cent. on the par value of the stock was to be paid to the trustees, for apportionment to the interest & to a fund for the bonus. At the date of an order for the winding up of the society, most of the stockholders had received payment in full of interest at 7 per cent. on the amount of loan stock issued, up to & including a date seven months before the order. The trustees lodged with the liquidator a proof stated to be for cash advanced on loan ; & this summons asked (i) whether the proof should be rejected to the extent of interest proved for above 7½ per cent. up to the date of the commencement of the winding up ; (ii) whether interest should be calculated, at 5 per cent., to the date of the order or to the commencement of the winding up ; & (iii) whether Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 66 (2) (b), had any application to proof or dividend in respect of the loan stock :—Held : (1) the amounts proved for by the trustees were to be computed only to the date of the commencement of the winding up ; (2) Bkpcy. 6357 ii. —— ——.]—In Oct. 1907, R., J., L., G., & H., five directors of C. & Co., Ltd., entered into agreements under which they became employees of the co., each receiving a salary & one-fifth of the net profits. The agreements were to remain in force for ten years, unless terminated as therein provided. R., being unable to attend to the business of the co., entered into a new agreement dated June 14, 1911, whereby his prior agreement was annulled, & it was agreed that he & his personal representatives should continue to be paid one-fifth of the net profits, so long as he or they retained the share interest in the capital of the co., which he then held, in one undivided holding. The agreements with the other directors were not cancelled, but, by supplemental agreements, it was provided that if they gave up their employment with the co. they also would continue to receive their respective one-fifth shares of the net profits, so long as their respective shares in the co. were retained in one holding. H. died in 1913 ; G. in 1914 ; R. in 1919. In 1920 £3,000 was appropriated in respect of directors' shares of the net profits, payable under their agreements, & was placed to the credit of a directors' remuneration account. This sum was subsequently divided into five sums of £600 & placed to the credit of their respective deposit accounts with the co. The co. had power under its arts. of assocn. to fix the remuneration of directors, & in pursuance of a resolution passed at the annual meeting of the co. on June 11, 1920, a sum of £3,500 was placed at the disposal of the managing directors, then J. & I., & two others, as a bonus for the year 1919-20. Of this sum £1,300 was allotted to J. & I. respectively. These amounts were not paid out, but were retained by the co. & placed to the credit of their deposit accounts in 1925. The co. having become insolvent, went into voluntary liquidation, & up to that time the five sums of £600 & the two sums of £1,300 had not been paid to the persons who claimed them :—Held : (1) the sums of £600 claimed by the personal representatives of H., G., & R., were sums due to members of the co. in their character of members by way of dividends, profits, or otherwise, within Cos. Act, 1908, s. 123 (1) (vii), & accordingly the persons claiming these sums were not entitled to compete with the ordinary creditors of the co. in respect thereof ; (2) J. & I., having continued their employment with the co. until after June 11, 1920, the sums of £600 claimed on their behalf were payable to them under their contracts of employment, & not in their character of members of the co., & so did not come within Cos. Act, 1908, s. 123 (1) (vii) ; (3) the sums of £1,300 due to I., & to the personal representatives of J., were sums given to them, not by agreement, but under the arts. of assocn., & so were not payable to them in their character of members within Cos. Two authors entered into agreements with a publishing co. for the exclusive right to print & publish certain books written by them. The copyright in some of the books was to go to the co., in others, to remain to the authors: & royalties were payable to the authors as in the agreements provided. The co. went into voluntary liquidation, & the liquidator sold its assets, including copies of the books: & it was agreed by a later agreement between him & the purchaser that nothing in the agreement should prejudice the purchaser's right to sell them. The co. became insolvent. On a summons to determine whether, where the copyright or some interest in it was vested in the co. at the date of the resolution to wind up, the sale was subject to Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), s. 60, & whether, where the copyright was not then vested in the co., the consent of the authors was necessary to the sale:—Held: Bkpcy. The Comrs. lodged a proof of debt with the liquidator in respect of the price of the coal, but, after having received two dividends, they claimed priority over the other creditors on the ground that the amount due was a debt due to the Crown :—Held : the debt was one due to the Crown, & was entitled to priority over the other debts of the co., Cos. The Board had wide powers, which it exercised at its discretion ; any power of interference which a Minister of the Crown possessed was not such as to make the acts of administration his acts. Portion of the amount was claimed as a preferential payment under Unemployment Insurance Act, 1920, s. 26 (1), in respect of contributions payable by the co. during the four months before the commencement of the winding up as specified in that sect., & the balance was claimed as a State debt to rank next after the preferential debts & in priority to the ordinary creditors :—Held : the claim of the Department other than such portion as was payable under sect. 26 (1), was not payable in priority to the claims of the general creditors of the co.—Re A. & B. On footing that company insolvent—Company found solvent—Right to prove for balance.]—A compulsory order having been made for the winding up of a co. on the ground of its being just & equitable to make such an order, the costs of the co. of the petition were taxed & paid out of the assets on the basis that it was insolvent. The co. was ultimately found to be solvent, & the solr. claimed to prove in the liquidation for the balance of his bill of costs, being solr. & client costs incurred upon the instructions of the co. & its directors in opposing the petition. The liquidator rejected the proof on the ground that the amount claimed represented costs already taxed off the bill, & the registrar upheld his decision on the ground that there was no right of proof for any costs beyond the taxed costs of the petition under r. 192 of the Winding-up Rules, 1929:—Held: the solr. was entitled to prove for any unpaid balance of costs due to him from the co., there being nothing to the contrary contained or implied in r. 192, which was concerned with the priorities of different sets of costs incurred in winding up. There being sufficient to pay all creditors in full, the co.'s solr. was entitled to be paid his costs as between solr. & client, & the liquidator was ordered to admit the proof, subject to taxation if he so desired.—Re C. Costs of summons by debenture-holders.]—The directors of a co. registered under 1862 Act, being empowered by their articles to borrow on debenture bonds any sums "necessary" for the business of the co., in Dec. 1865, issued twenty debentures of £100 each, all in the same form, by which they pledged "the property belonging to us for the time being during the subsistence of the debenture, with all the buildings & stock on, & connected with, our said property, & all the receipts & revenues to arise therefrom"; & declared that the entire debenture loan & interest should be a first charge on "our undertaking & property & receipts & revenues aforesaid." The business of the co. was to buy & sell land, to build, buy, & sell houses, to furnish houses for hotels, & to carry on the business of hotel keepers. A winding-up order having been made, the liquidator proceeded to sell certain freehold & leasehold estate belonging to the co.; but the purchaser refused to complete unless the debenture-holders were satisfied. The debenture-holders thereupon took out a summons in Chambers:—Held: after making all just allowances to the liquidator in realising the fund, the debenture-holders, applying by way of summons in the matter of the winding up, were entitled to their costs, as well as to their principal & interest, out of the fund, in priority to all other charges.—Re MARINE MANSIONS CO. A private co., of which a father & son were the only directors & shareholders, was ordered to be wound up, & within the preceding three months the son paid a sum of £1,503 odd into the co.'s bank to reduce an overdraft of the co. to secure which his father had given a guarantee. —— Judgment after winding up—Right of company to recover money from third party based on company's liability to judgment creditor—No ground for not staying execution.]—The manager of a co. fraudulently & without authority accepted bills of exchange in the co.'s name, & upon those bills the co. was sued to judgment by the holders. After the commencement of the action the co. went into voluntary liquidation. The co. subsequently recovered judgment in an action against a third party for damages for having wrongfully facilitated the commission of the above fraud, & for having thereby rendered the co. liable on the bills. The judgment creditors in the first action then sought to attach under a garnishee order the money so payable to the co. by the third party. On an application by the co. to stay the garnishee proceedings:—Held: where a judgment is recovered against a co. which is in voluntary liquidation the invariable practice of the ct. is to stay execution of the judgment unless there are very exceptional reasons for exercising its discretion otherwise, & the fact that the only right of the co. to recover the money claimed from the garnishees was based upon the co's liability to the judgment creditors was not such an exceptional circumstance as to take the case out of the general rule.—ANGLO-BALTIC & MEDITERRANEAN BANK v. BARBER & CO., [1924] 2 K. A creditor cannot obtain an order to continue a voluntary winding up under the supervision of the ct. unless he possesses all the qualifications required of a creditor petitioning for a compulsory winding-up order. Therefore, a debt incurred by a co. under an agreement entered into after it has gone into voluntary liquidation is no ground for a petition for a supervision order, although the voluntary liquidation & the agreement formed parts of one scheme.—Re Bank of South Australia, [1894] 3 Ch. 722 ; 64 L. The persons summoned to the meeting under the above sect. were the policy-holders of the co., & no separate meeting was summoned of those whose policies had, as distinct from those whose policies had not, matured:—Held: the insured persons whose policies had matured formed a distinct class of creditors from those whose policies had not matured; a separate meeting of such class ought to have been held under the Act in order to make the arrangement binding upon the members of that class; & the arrangement did not, therefore, operate as a release by deft. of his claim against pltfs.—SOVEREIGN LIFE ASSURANCE CO. v. DODD, [1892] 2 Q. si. Object of scheme—Clarification of rights.]—(1) The existence of reasonable doubts as to the rights of shareholders under the memorandum of assocn. of a co. is a ground warranting the ct. in sanctioning a scheme of arrangement the effect of which is to remove those doubts.

A limited co. consisted of three classes of shareholders, viz. A., B. & C., whose respective rights were determined by clause 5 of the memorandum of assocn. Questions having arisen as to the rights of the A. shareholders under clause 5, the co. proposed a scheme of arrangement by which clause 5 was to be replaced by a new clause, the effect of which was to determine exactly the rights of the A. shareholders:—Held: as the proposed scheme was one which would commend itself to a reasonable business man, it would receive the sanction of the ct.

(2) The unsuccessful objector then moved that the co. should be found liable for his expenses, on the ground that dissentient shareholders should not be discouraged from bringing to the notice of the ct. considerations which might reasonably influence the ct. in arriving at a right decision. Winding-up of reinsurer—Claim against insuring company—Set-off.]—By a treaty of reinsurance dated Apr. 13, 1920, between two insurance cos. the reinsurer accepted a share of all insurances accepted by or renewed by the insuring co. in its fire department. By Art. VIII. of the treaty the insuring co. was entitled to retain & accumulate out of money due to the reinsurer a sum equal to 40 per cent. of the share of all premiums credited to the reinsurer in the first year, this sum to remain as a deposit to secure the due performance of the reinsurer's obligation. The insuring co. was to be entitled to retain the deposit, or any balance remaining after satisfying any obligation in respect of which the reinsurer might make default, until the determination of the agreement, paying the reinsurer interest at 3½ per cent. per annum on any part of the deposit not used in manner aforesaid. By Art. IX. the agreement was immediately determinable by notice on the reinsurer going into liquidation. On Jan. 31, 1922, the reinsurer presented its own winding-up petition, & on Feb. 1, 1922, the insuring co. gave notice determining the agreement. On Feb. 14, 1922, a compulsory order was made for the winding up of the reinsurer. After all obligations under the treaty had been satisfied, there remained in the possession of the insuring co. a sum of over £8,000 out of the deposit & a sum of accrued interest. The liquidator of the reinsurer took out a summons for a declaration that the insuring co. was bound to pay over the deposit & interest in full. The insuring co. claimed to

"Unregistered company"—Benevolent society.]—A co. & its directors instituted & endowed a benevolent society, which was not registered under Friendly Societies Act, 1896, & made it a condition in the contract of employment of its manual labourers that they should be members of the society. In addition to income derived from the endowment fund, further income was provided, in terms of the constitution, by the members paying small weekly sums to the society, which were deducted from their wages, & by the co. paying an equal amount. The members & their dependants were respectively entitled to sickness & death benefits. The management was vested in a committee which was elected by the members in annual general meeting. The co., having been bought up by a larger concern, went out of business, & the works were eventually closed down. A special meeting of the society was thereafter held, at which it was resolved to cease receiving contributions & paying benefits. Subsequently certain officers of the society presented a petition for the winding up of the society as an "unregistered co." :—Held : the society was not a "partnership, assocn., or co." within Cos. it was provided that, in the event of the co. being wound up, the holders of the preference shares should be entitled to have the surplus assets applied, in the first place, in repaying to them the amount paid up on their preference shares, but should not be entitled to any further participation in such surplus assets:—Held: Cos. Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 118), ss. 13, 14, limited a co. to which Part II. of that Act applied in respect of their powers to attach rights of dividend to their preference shares, but did not limit a co. in respect of their powers to attach other privileges; the privilege of having a priority as regards repayment of capital in a winding-up was a privilege which the co. was entitled to attach to the preference shares; &, consequently, the further condition restricting the holders of preference shares in the case of a winding-up to repayment out of the surplus assets of the capital paid up on such shares was not ultra vires & was not invalid. —WINDERMERE DISTRICT GAS & WATER CO. v. WHITEHEAD, [1931] 1 Ch. 558; 100 L. In 1917 the Bolshevist revolution took place, & the bank ceased to carry on any business in Russia, its last general meeting being held at Petrograd in June, 1917. In 1921 an action was commenced in the name of the bank by British shareholders to recover two sums of £100,000 & £80,000, forming part of a credit lodged by the former Russian Govt. with defts., an English bank, & alleged to have been assigned to pltfs. e i. —— —— ——.]—A winding-up order by a Canadian ct. in the matter of a Scotch co. doing business in Canada, & having assets & owing debts in Canada, which order was made on the petition of a Canadian creditor, purported to put all insurance cos. in Russia into liquidation & to appropriate their property. In the spring of 1923 C. sent a notice to the registrar that the co. which he represented had ceased to exist, & at his request this notice was placed upon the file. In the summer of the same year resps. brought an action against the co. by specially indorsed writ for payment of a sum of money claimed to be due to them in respect of certain insurance transactions. The writ was served upon C., who protested that he had no power to act for the co., & judgment was signed in default of appearance:—Held: (1) at the date of the writ the co. had not ceased to exist by virtue of the decrees of the Soviet Govt.; (2) the service of the writ on C. was valid; (3) the co. by putting on the file the name of a person authorised to accept service of process on its behalf agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of the ct., & it must be assumed that the Russian Govt. would, according to the comity of nations, recognise the judgment as effective.—EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ASSURANCE CORPN. v. SEDGWICK COLLINS & CO., [1927] A. 8527b. —— Company extinct—Judgment by default—Garnishee proceedings—Invalid.]—An English firm commenced an action in 1930 against the Moscow Industrial Bank claiming payment of a large sum of money, &, on the strength of an affidavit stating that the Moscow Industrial Bank was domiciled in Russia & that there was no way of effecting personal service on it, obtained leave under R. S. C., Ord. 9, r. 2, to serve notice of the writ by posting it by registered letter to the bank at Moscow where its head office had been. No appearance having been entered, judgment by default was signed against the Moscow Industrial Bank on Nov. 24, 1930. Some days later a letter was received from the London Embassy of the Soviet Republic, stating that notice of the writ could not be delivered, as the Moscow Industrial Bank went out of existence in 1917. After having obtained judgment by default, pltfs. obtained a garnishee order nisi against the Midland Bank attaching money alleged to be due from that bank to the Moscow Industrial Bank, & that order was subsequently made absolute. On appeal by the Midland Bank:—Held: (1) on the evidence of the Russian decrees as to Russian corpns. & of Russian lawyers as to the effect of those decrees, the Moscow Industrial Bank had ceased to exist as a juristic person in 1930, & therefore the judgment by default obtained against it by pltfs. was a nullity, & consequently no garnishee proceedings could be founded upon it; (2) in any view the garnishee order nisi ought not to have been made absolute, inasmuch as service of notice of the writ on the Moscow Industrial Bank was irregular in that the procedure applicable to service in a foreign country, as prescribed by R. S. C., Ord. 11, r. 8, had not been followed.

Per SCRUTTON, L.J.: If it comes to the knowledge of the ct. that it has entered judgment in default of appearance against a man who was at the time dead, or a co. which was at the time dissolved, or non-existent according to the law of its country of origin, the ct. is bound, after hearing the parties interested, of its own motion to set the judgment aside.—LAZARD BROS. & CO. v. BANQUE INDUSTRIELLE DE MOSCOU, LAZARD BROS. & CO. v. MIDLAND BANK, LTD., [1932] 1 K. 8548b. ——————.]—A petition was presented by creditors, whose debt was disputed, for the compulsory winding-up of an unregistered foreign co. which had a branch in England & which was dissolved by the laws of Russia before the 1929 Act came into operation:—Held: (1) the provisions of 1929 Act, s. 338, notwithstanding sub-sect. 2 of sect. 338, did not alter the law as it existed, before that statute came into operation, under the corresponding sects. of the Acts of 1862 & 1908, & the ct. had therefore jurisdiction to make an order with the consent of the liquidator previously appointed by the ct. in Scotland, as ancillary to the winding-up proceedings there:—Held: a valid order.—Re SCOTTISH CANADIAN ASBESTOS CO., ALLEN v. HANSON (1890), 18 S. 903. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph :—

-.]—By the Lanchester Inclosure Act, 1773, the moors & commons of the manor of Lanchester, Durham, were divided & allotted. The Act provided that the lord of the manor & his assigns should have, hold & enjoy all mines & minerals within & under the allotments, with full & free liberty of searching for, draining, winning & working the mines & minerals by any ways or means then in use or thereafter to be invented as fully & freely as he might or could have had, held, used & enjoyed the same in case that Act had not been made without paying any damages or making any satisfaction for so doing ; & also that the annual rental of a certain allotment to the justices should be applied in or towards the compensation of those allottees whose allotments were damnified by the exercise of the lord's mining rights, & that any deficiency should be made up by means of a rate levied upon all the allottees :—Held : (1) the case was governed by the decision of the Ct. of Appeal in Consett Waterworks Co. v. Ritson, No. 901, ante, which was a decision on the identical question arising on the construction of the same Act & in the same circumstances, & although the reasoning upon which that decision was founded had been disapproved of by the House of Lords in Butterknowle Colliery Co. v. Bishop Auckland Industrial Co., No. 905, post, the decision itself had not been overruled & was therefore binding upon the ct., & defts. had a right to work the mines so as to let down the surface of the land without paying damages or making any compensation to plts. ; (2) (YOUNGER, L.J.) the decision at which the Ct. of Appeal had felt itself compelled to arrive in deference to authority binding upon it might quite well have been reached on the construction of the Act itself apart altogether from the decision by which it was bound.—CONSETT INDUSTRIAL & PROVIDENT SOCIETY, LTD. v. CONSETT IRON CO., [1922] 2 Ch. 135 ; 91 L. 116a. —— Land not bonâ fide intended to be taken for purpose.]—Applts. had statutory power to acquire compulsorily land required for the purpose of making or extending streets, also land required for "carrying out improvements in or remodelling any portion of the city." In connection with the extension of a street, they resolved to acquire resps.' land for the latter purpose. They had previously been restrained from acquiring the land for the extension, on the ground that it was not really required for that purpose, but that its purchase was desired because of its probable increase in value. No plan for improving or remodelling the area was considered or proposed, & evidence as to proceedings in the council showed that applts. were endeavouring to give a new form to the transaction previously decided upon, rather than considering whether resps.' land was required for improving or remodelling :—Held : the evidence sustained the lower ct.'s conclusion of fact that applts. were exercising their powers for a purpose differing from those specified by the statute, & they had rightly been restrained from acquiring resps.' land.—SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. CAMPBELL, [1925] A. 133a. For pleasure gardens & street widening—Part used for pleasure garden—May be subsequently used for street widening.]—A local authority bought land in 1896 for the purposes of: (1) street widening; (2) making new streets; (3) providing public walks & pleasure gardens. The land was conveyed to the local authority for the purposes authorised by the Public Health Acts. A plan & specifications were submitted to the Local Government Board, & subsequently the scheme was carried out in accordance with the plan & specifications. The pleasure gardens were surrounded by railings, & were not dedicated or open to the public. In 1927 the local authority resolved to utilise one of the pleasure grounds for the purpose of street widening & providing a parking place for motor cars. Objections were raised by some of the occupiers of adjoining premises, & an action was brought to restrain the local authority from carrying out their resolution:—Held: as one of the purposes for which the land was acquired was street widening, the local authority was not acting ultra vires in using part of the pleasure gardens for that purpose.—A.-G. v. SUNDERLAND CORPN., [1929] 2 Ch. 436; 45 T. 155a. —— Right to erect electric advertisement sign.]—The lessees of a hotel entered into two contracts with a firm of advertising agents, under the terms of which the latter were entitled to erect and exhibit, for a term of years, upon the roof of the hotel, electrically illuminated advertisements. An electric sign was duly erected. Before the expiration of the term the local authority, in exercise of its statutory powers, served the lessees with a notice to treat for the purchase of their estate & interest in the hotel, &, ultimately, having acquired the reversion to the lessees' term, took possession, closed the hotel, & began to demolish it. The electric sign was removed by arrangement with the advertising agents, who subsequently commenced an action against the lessees to recover damages for breach of the two contracts:—Held: the local authority had acquired defts.' interest in the premises by compulsion; the two contracts did not confer upon pltfs. any proprietary interest or estate in the hotel; &, as it could not be said that both parties to those contracts had made their bargain upon the footing that if the local authority exercised their powers & took the hotel the contracts were to be discharged, there must be a declaration that defts were liable to pltfs. for damages for breach of those contracts.—WALTON HARVEY, LTD. v. WALKER & HOMFRAYS, LTD., [1931] 1 Ch. 274; 144 L. 263a. —— ——.]—By a private Act the President of the Air Council was authorised to enter upon, take & use all or any of certain lands, & also to construct a certain new thoroughfare. By sect. 2 he was authorised to stop up a portion of a certain lane known as Plough-lane. By sect. 5, "subject as hereinafter provided the Lands Clauses Acts are for the purpose of the acquisition of land under this Act incorporated with this Act." Then followed several exceptions, which did not specify sect. 68 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, which deals with injurious affection. Lands were taken by the President under the special Act, & the said portion of Plough-lane was stopped up.

The claimant owned a dwelling-house in Plough-lane, not the part stopped up. No lands of the claimant were taken by the President under the Act, but his premises were depreciated in value to the extent of £100, through the stopping up of a portion of Plough-lane, rendering his premises less accessible in one direction. The claimant claimed compensation in respect of the stopping up of this portion of Plough-lane. On the hearing of an award in the form of a special case stated by an official arbitrator under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), s. 6 (1), it was contended for the President of the Air Council that the claimant had no right to claim compensation on the ground that no portion of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, was incorporated with the special Act as regards sect. 2 thereof, which was not a sect. for the purpose of the acquisition of land, but one merely authorising the closing of a thoroughfare ; & also on the ground that sect. 68 of the Act of 1845 was not incorporated with the Special Act as its provisions for "injurious affection" were not for the acquisition of land. The official arbitrator asked the following question of the ct. : Was the claimant entitled to be paid compensation in respect of the stopping up of this portion of Plough-lane ? The ct. answered the question in the affirmative.—WRIGHT v. AIR COUNCIL, PRESIDENT (1929), 143 L. T. 43.

274a. By construction of bridge.]—Resps., a county council, were empowered by a private Act to build a bridge across a navigable river giving access to a wharf, which was resorted to by sea-going vessels & was also used for the storage of goods. The bridge, when built, constituted an obstruction to the navigation & interfered with access to the wharf, so that goods destined for the wharf had to be transhipped from sea-going vessels into barges below the bridge, & the owners of the wharf had to acquire a new wharf below the bridge. The owners of the old wharf, i.e., the freeholders, & a mtgee., & the occupiers, who were tenants at will, claimed compensation under the following heads : depreciation of freehold value of the old wharf ; cost of the new wharf ; damage through loss of traffic ;

650. For existing paragraph & citations substitute the following :—

The Blackpool Improvement Act, 1917, s. 70, enacted that the provisions of the sect. should, unless otherwise agreed in writing, apply for the benefit & protection of a certain co. as owners of the land referred to in the section. By its terms the owners were to sell & the corpn. was to buy the land therein described at a price to be determined, in default of agreement, by arbitration in the manner provided by the Lands Clauses Acts as modified by that Act, & a notice to treat was to be served by the corpn. within a defined time. It was further provided that the corpn. should not use the land so acquired for certain purposes which might cause a nuisance or annoyance to the owners. By Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), where by any statute, whether passed before or after the passing of this Act, land is authorised to be acquired compulsorily by any local authority, any question of disputed compensation is to be determined in the manner thereby provided, & the provisions of the Act by which the land is authorised to be acquired, or of any Act incorporated therewith, so far as inconsistent with this Act, shall cease to have effect. Notice to treat was served on the owners by the corpn. shortly before the coming into operation of the Act of 1919, but no arbitrator had been appointed to fix the price. A question having arisen whether the compensation was to be assessed under the Act of 1919 or under the private Act of 1917 :—Held : the Act of 1919 did not apply, & the compensation was to be ascertained in 650a. —— Acquisition of land & appointment of arbitrator under Public Health Act, 1875, (c. 55.)]—A land co. was the owner in fee simple of certain land through which a sewerage board, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), after duly serving on the co. notice of intention to do so, carried a sewer & a rising main. Subsequently an agreement in writing was entered into between the parties regarding what had been done. Differences having arisen regarding the compensation to be paid by the board to the co., recourse was had to arbn. The arbitrator was appointed under Public Health Act, 1875, & before entering on the arbn. made the statutory declaration under that Act. Having considered the disputes he made an alternative award in the form of a special case for the opinion of the ct. If the ct. was of opinion that compensation was to be assessed solely under Public Health Act, 1875, he awarded the co. £5,090; if the arbitration was under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), & the basis on which compensation was to be awarded was to be governed by the principles in s. 2 of that Act, he awarded the co. £2,148:—Held: as the land had been acquired under powers conferred by Public Health Act, 1875, before the agreement between the parties was entered into, it had been acquired compulsorily, & as there was nothing in the agreement which affected the primary basis of the value of the land nor any other matter, including the appointment of the arbitrator expressly under Public Health Act, 1875, which was inconsistent with the rules laid down by s. 2 of the Act of 1919, that Act applied to the arbn., & the co. should be awarded £2,148.—THURROCK, GRAYS & TILBURY JOINT SEWERAGE BOARD v. THAMES LAND CO., LTD. 761a. —— Award embodying decision of court on special case.]—An official arbitrator stated a case under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), & the Div. Ct. decided adversely to the contention of claimants for compensation. The arbitrator then made his award, embodying therein the decision of the Div. Ct. Claimants applied to another Div. Ct. to set the award aside, on the ground that the award was on the face of it erroneous in law, but the ct. dismissed the application. 773a. Award of lump sum—Validity.]—Claimant was the owner of certain land with regard to the acquisition of which an arbn. was held under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57). He claimed £17,362, &, before the hearing of the arbn., the President of the Air Council made an unconditional offer of £10,000. The sum awarded to claimant by the official arbitrator in respect of his interest in the land & the consequential damage thereto was £11,415. In dealing with the costs the arbitrator directed the Council "to pay £100 towards the costs of claimant." Claimant applied to the ct. by motion for the award to be remitted to the arbitrator on the ground that he had, in making the above order as to costs, not properly exercised the discretion conferred upon him by sect. 5 (4) of the above Act:—Held: in awarding the lump sum of £100, the arbitrator had in terms awarded to claimant part of his costs of the arbn. within sect. 5, & as it seemed reasonably clear from the Act that, when a sum was awarded by the arbitrator in excess of the amount offered by the authority but less than the sum which claimant had offered to accept, the arbitrator had an absolute discretion as to the costs, the motion to review the award failed.—BRADSHAW v. AIR COUNCIL, [1926] Ch. 329; 95 L. A bill filed against a railway co. by the grantee of an annuity charged on land taken by the co. stated that before the grant of the annuity the land was subject to a mtge. in fee, which had since been paid off, but that there had been no reconveyance ; that the defts., under the powers of their act, had given the pltf. notice to treat for the land charged with the annuity, but without any further proceeding had taken possession of the land. The prayer was that the co. might be decreed to pay the arrears of the annuity & to secure the future payment of it. The defence made by the answer & evidence was that the co. had purchased from the prior incumbrancer under a power of sale :—Held : pltf. could not on such pleadings enforce a specific performance of the notice to treat regarded as a contract to purchase pltfs.' interest. The compensation to be made to the lessee for the unexpired term of his lease should cover all reasonable cost of moving, refitting & settling the new premises ; loss of time in seeking new location ; depreciation of valuable business fixtures & fittings & damage thereto due to moving, etc., & a certain amount for dislocation or disturbance of business, which, however, cannot be fixed with mathematical certainty. They also proposed to acquire compulsorily a beerhouse within the area with the objects, (a) of controlling or regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquor on the site, that control to be based on management by some co. or assocn. whose servants were not to have a pecuniary interest in the sale of alcohol, & (b) of providing for the general entertainment & refreshment of the population :—Held : the Act contemplated extensive schemes for the provision of working-class houses by local authorities, involving in many cases the acquisition of considerable areas of land & extending even to the creation of a new town ; sect. 12 (1), treated the land within the selected area as a whole, & as something in the nature of a building estate, &, as incidental to the complete control of the development of the building scheme, empowered the local authority to acquire any houses or other buildings, whether the same were or were not required for use as, or as a site for, workmen's dwellings, or for roads or other purposes mentioned in the earlier Housing Acts ; & that power was not limited to houses which it was proposed to adapt for working-class accommodation under the power to alter contained in the later part of the sub-sect. ; upon the above construction of the Act, subject to confirmation by the Minister of Health, defts. had power under sect. 12 (1) of the Act to acquire compulsorily the beerhouse in question for the attainment of the objects above-mentioned.

Part of its business was transacted in Russia, & for the purpose of that business pltfs., through their London bankers, deposited moneys & Russian Treasury Bonds with the Petrograd branch of the Banque de Commerce de l'Azoff-Don. Having done so, pltfs. took out two policies of insurance to insure themselves against loss or damage to the insured property "directly caused by fire, rioters, civil commotions, war, civil war, revolutions, rebellions, military or usurped power. . . ." No claim was to attach under the policy (inter alia) "for confiscation or destruction by the Govt. of the country in which the property is situated." In Dec. 1917, during the currency of the policy, the Banque de Commerce was occupied by soldiers & sailors of the Red Guard, & by the Bolshevists, purporting to act under the authority of an executive committee of the Commissaries of the People. They demanded & obtained control & possession of the bank & everything contained in it, including the insured property. Two actions were brought claiming for losses under the policies, & the question arose with regard to the recognition of the Soviet Govt. as a sovereign power :—Held : on the information then available, the act of the military in seizing the insured property was an act of confiscation by the Govt. of Russia which was in existence at the material time, & had since been recognised by His Majesty's Govt. as the de facto Govt. of Russia, & was not an act of a usurped authority ; therefore the claim failed by reason of the clause which provided that no claim was to attach under the policy ". . . for confiscation or destruction by the Govt. of the country in which the property is situated."—WHITE, CHILD & BENEY, LTD. v SIMMONS, WHITE, CHILD & BENEY, LTD. v. EAGLE STAR & BRITISH DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO. 68a. —— ——.]—Applt. was the proprietor of a Scotch estate, but left Scotland for America in 1895 to earn his living. In 1901 he married resp., an American lady, & in 1902 they went to Quebec where he carried on the business of manufacturing arms. They lived together there till 1917 with occasional visits to England. In 1917 applt. went to Washington, staying there as an expert adviser on munitions till Sept. 1918, when he stayed a certain time in Great Britain & in 1918 leased a house in London. In 1922 he took a lease of a flat in New York of which he remained tenant when these proceedings for divorce began in Dec. 1923. Up to the year 1920 there was no statement by applt. of his intention to abandon his Scottish domicil, & as late as Dec. 1920, he stated in an affidavit that he was a domiciled Scotchman. Between Dec. 1920, & the institution of these proceedings he was trying for the purposes of taxation to become a resident alien in the United States, & in Apr. 1923, succeeded. In Jan. 1924, after these proceedings he sought to be naturalised as an American citizen. He spent increasing periods of time at his Scottish estate & referred to it as his home in a letter written to resp. in Nov. 1922. Since 1920, however, he had made statements in documents & verbally that he intended to live permanently in New York, though such statements were never made to his wife, nor, with one exception, to any personal friend :—

84a. ——— ——— Although subject to Aliens Order.]—In a husband's suit for dissolution of marriage the wife objected to the jurisdiction on the ground that the domicil of the husband was not English. The husband was a waiter of Italian nationality & was registered as an alien in England, & as such was subject to the restrictions & liabilities by the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914 (c. 12), & the Aliens Order, 1920:—Held: (1) the provisions of the Act of 1914 & the Order of 1920 did not preclude the petitioner from acquiring an English domicil of choice; (2) on the facts, petitioner had discharged the onus on him of proving that he had acquired an English domicil of choice.—BOLDRINI v. BOLDRINI & MARTINI, [1932] P. 9; 101 L. J. P. 4; 146 L. T. 121; 48 T. L. R. 94; 75 Sol. Jo. 868, C. A.

88a. ——— ———.]—It being settled that a change of domicil must be made animo et facto, the animus may be inferred by the factum of residence within the new domicil, but in order to warrant that inference the quality of the residence must be taken into account; mere length of residence is not of itself sufficient.

A testator who died in Liverpool in 1927, aged eighty-two & unmarried, left a holograph will, valid by the law of Scotland but invalid by the law of England. Testator's domicil of origin was Scottish, & he lived the greater part of his life in Glasgow. Originally employed there as a commercial traveller he gave up that employment in 1882 & never worked again. In 1892 he went to Liverpool to be near a brother & sister, & lived there for the last thirty-five years of his life. He was supplied with the means of subsistence by his brother & sister, & on the death of his sister he succeeded to the whole of her estate. With the exception of family ties he had few, if any, ties in either England or Scotland. In an action by beneficiaries under the will against testator's next of kin for a declaration that testator was domiciled in Scotland at the date of his death:—Held: in the absence of independent evidence of an intention on the part of testator to change his domicil, the burden which lay on the next of kin of proving that he had abandoned his domicil of origin had not been discharged.—BOWIE OR RAMSAY v. LIVERPOOL ROYAL INFIRMARY, [1930] A. 100a. ——— ———.]—Resp., a domiciled Englishman, was an officer in the Indian Army, & consequently, although his true matrimonial & conjugal home had been in England, he was temporarily resident in India when a petition for judicial separation was served upon him:—Held: without deciding whether resp.'s English domicile was sufficient to found jurisdiction, in the circumstances, as resp.'s temporary residence in India was independent of his personal volition, but was determined by his superior officers, he had a sufficient matrimonial residence in this country to give jurisdiction to the ct.—WARD v. WARD (1923), 39 T. 155a. —— Material consideration.]—D., who was born in Edinburgh in 1858, went out to Calcutta, India, in 1875 & worked in his uncle's cotton mills, becoming a partner in his uncle's firm in 1880. In 1883 he returned for a few months, but from 1883 to 1900 remained working in India, making his business his life. He seldom went into society, but was fond of Indians, & chiefly associated with them. In 1900 he returned to England & married his cousin, & took her out with him to Calcutta in 1901, but, the climate not suiting her, she returned in Nov. 1901, to England. From Jan. 1903 to 1910, he paid visits for a substantial time each year to be with his wife in England, where he had bought a house. In 1903 a child was born. From Jan. 1912 to Nov. 1915, D. remained in England, being, it was said, detained by litigation. In 1916 his wife went out to Calcutta, & she & her daughter lived with her husband in his flat over his offices. She returned with her daughter after two months. In 1917 D. followed his wife home, & until his death on July 3, 1928, remained in England, except for short visits to India in 1919, 1920, 1922, 1924, & 1925. In his will dated June 28, 1922, he made a declaration of Indian domicile. On his death, the Crown, on the ground that he was domiciled in the United Kingdom, claimed death duties on his estate, the value of which was many millions of pounds. On the question whether, as the exors. of the will alleged, he had acquired a domicile of choice in India & lost his domicile of origin :—Held : the earlier period of D.'s life up to the year 1900 could not be estimated in deciding whether he had acquired a domicile of choice in India in a compartment separate from his later years, & the declaration in his will did not decide the point, but where his wife & children had their permanent residence was material as to a man's domicile. There was a distinction between residence & domicile, & it could not be inferred from the fact of residence that domicile resulted. On the facts there was no clear evidence, as was necessary, of any manifest & concluded intention of change of domicile to overcome the domicile of origin. Therefore the onus of proof of a domicile of choice was not discharged, & D. died domiciled in the United Kingdom.—A.-G. v. YULE & MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA (1931), 145 L. T. 9, C. A.

457a. ——.]—(1) The succession to movable property, wherever situate, is governed by the law of testator's domicil, that is to say, the whole law of the country of domicil, including the rules of private international law administered by its tribunals. The inquiry in an English ct. before which such a question of succession comes is, therefore, what the cts. of the country of domicil would decide in the particular case. The result is that, where by the law of the domicil the succession to the movables of a testator depends on the law of that testator's nationality, an English ct. will hold that the succession is governed by the law of the nationality & not by the municipal law of the domicil.

Part VII.—Contracts.

639. To the cross-reference before this case add "No. 1981a."

639a. ——.]—Pltf. was received by defts., a British co., under a contract made in Detroit, to be carried in one of their steamships from New York to Southampton. The contract contained a clause that the shipowners should not be liable for loss, damage or delay to a passenger or his baggage arising from the act of God, or from causes of any kind beyond the carrier's control, even though the loss, damage or delay might have been caused by the neglect or default of the shipowners' servants. It was further provided that all questions arising under the clause should be decided according to English law. A subsequent clause provided that no claim under the contract should be enforceable against the shipowners unless a written notice thereof was delivered to them within three days after the passenger should be landed from the steamer at the termination of her voyage. In the course of the voyage one of pltf.'s hands was injured by reason of the negligence of defts.' servants, but no written notice of any claim was given by pltf. within the time limited by the contract:—Held: the language of the contract showed that it was the intention of the parties that it should be wholly governed by English law; the clause relieving defts. from liability for the negligence of their servants, though void by the law in force in Detroit, was valid & enforceable, by English law, but, applying the ejusdem generis rule, the clause did not absolve defts. from liability for pltf.'s injury.—JONES v. OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD., [1924] 2 K. 640a. —— Inclusion of provisions of local Ordinance.]—Certain parcels of oranges were shipped at Jaffa upon an Esthonian steamship for carriage to Hull. The ship was under time charter to a British firm, who ran a line of steamships called the Jaffa Union Line. The bills of lading, which were signed by directors of a Palestine corporation, the Jaffa Union Line, Ltd., contained the following clause: "This bill of lading wherever signed is to be construed in accordance with English law." Pltfs. were Hull fruit merchants, two of whom were indorsees of certain of the bills of lading & sued as owners of the cases of fruit therein mentioned; nine others had merely paid the freight & sued on an implied contract with deft. shipowners to deliver the cases in good order & condition according to the terms of the bills of lading. The Palestine Carriage of Goods by Sea Ordinance, No. 43 of 1926, incorporated the rules relating to bills of lading adopted by the International Conference on Maritime Law held at Brussels in 1922–23, generally known as the Hague Rules. Clause 4 of the Ordinance was in the following terms: "Every bill of lading . . . issued in Palestine which contains or is evidence of any contract to which the Rules apply shall contain an express statement that it is to have effect subject to the provision of the said Rules as applied by this Ordinance, & shall be deemed to have effect subject thereto, notwithstanding the omission of such express statement." Pltfs.' action was in respect of damage &/or short delivery. Defts. set up various exceptions in the bills of lading, & pltfs. pleaded in reply that the contracts were governed by the Palestine Ordinance; that accordingly, notwithstanding the omission of a statement to that effect, the Hague Rules should be deemed to be written into the contracts, &, therefore, that the exceptions relied on were of no avail. The question whether the bills of lading were subject to the provisions of the Ordinance was set down for trial as a preliminary issue. The judge held that they were so subject, & that all pltfs. were entitled to succeed on the preliminary issue. Defts. appealed:—Held: (1) the express terms of the Ordinance, based on an international convention, could not be defeated by the insertion of a clause in the bills of lading that they were to be construed according to English law, & the bills of lading were subject to the provisions of the Ordinance & the Rules thereunder, &, with those terms read into them, should then be construed according to English law; but (2) the ct. had not sufficient information as to the facts to determine the effect of that decision on the nine pltfs. who sued on implied contracts, &, while the appeal would be dismissed, the judgment must be varied to that extent.—THE TORNI, [1932] P. 78; 101 L. J. P. 44; 147 L. T. 208; 48 T. L. R. 471, C. A.

640b. Agreement for contract to be subject to foreign law—Contract cancelled by decree of foreign Government.]—In May, 1903, pltf. took out a 20 year endowment life insurance policy with defts. for 10,000 roubles payable at defts.' office in St. Petersburgh, & by the terms of the policy all premiums were to be paid in Russia. Pltf. paid all the premiums in Russia down to 1917, & then in London down to 1919. By the terms of an Imperial Decree of the Russian Empire, dated July 7, 1889, which were incorporated in the policy, it was provided (inter alia) that all disputes in connection with insurance operations should be settled according to Russian laws & in Russian cts. of justice. By a Monopolisation Decree of the Russian Soviet Govt., dated Dec. 1918, insurance in all its forms was declared a State monopoly, & in Nov. 1919, a Decree of Cancellation abolished life assurance altogether in the Soviet Republic, & all existing contracts were annulled. In those circumstances pltf., who was prevented by the above decrees of 1918 & 1919 from suing on the policy in Russia, brought an action in England for a declaration that defts. were liable to him under the policy :—Held : the proper law of the contract was, according to the policy rules, the law of Russia, & the effect of the Cancellation Decree of Nov. 1919, was that the contract, if in fact there was any contractual nexus left in existence between the parties after the Monopolisation Decree of 1918 came into force, was annulled, & pltf. could not recover on it.—PERRY v. EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF U.S.A. 694a. —— Charterparty made in Egypt—Documents & consignees English—Ship Swedish.] —By two freight engagement notes made in Egypt between pltfs., a firm carrying on business in Egypt, & defts., a British co. with a branch office in Egypt, pltfs. agreed to reserve room for certain cottonseed for shipment to London by a steamer to be specified. Under a charterparty made between the owners of the Swedish steamship A. & pltfs. as charterers the A. loaded the cargo at Alexandria for delivery in London; & pltfs., "as agents only," issued bills of lading whereby the cargo was to be delivered in London to the order of the defts. on payment of freight by them at the specified rate. In the course of the voyage the A. came into collision with another vessel, & was so badly injured that she had to be towed to Cadiz, where she was found to be a constructive total loss. The cargo, accordingly, was discharged at Cadiz & delivery was taken there by defts. Pltfs., suing on behalf of the shipowners, claimed distance (i.e. pro rata) freight, which they alleged was payable either under the law of the flag (Swedish) or the lex loci contractus (Egypt). Defts. alleged that the law of England applied, under which pro rata freight is not payable :—Held : all the authorities showed that the best criterion of what law was to be applied was to be found in the intention of the parties, &, if the parties intended otherwise, the presumption was rebutted that a contract for the carriage of goods by sea was governed by the law of the flag; looking at the circumstances broadly, & having regard (inter alia) to the facts that all the documents were in English & on English forms, that delivery & payment were to be in England, the freight engagement notes did not specify a ship of any particular nationality, defts. were a British firm, & the British position in Egypt had for many years been predominant, the inference was that the parties, who as business people must be taken to have intended what was most convenient, intended English law to apply; & consequently the claim for distance freight failed.—THE ADRIATIC, [1931] P. 241; 100 L. The co. had a branch in London & in most of the capitals of Europe, the branch in Paris being its head office for Europe. The general manager of the London branch had no general authority to issue policies in this country. Certain life policies signed by the president & secretary of the co. & countersigned by the general manager for Europe, were issued in London to German nationals before the outbreak of the war. The policies were not under seal. The policy moneys were expressed to be payable in London, but all premiums were payable either at the central office in New York or at the office where the insurance was payable, & proofs of death were to be furnished at the New York office. An indorsement on the policy provided that it should be construed according to English law :—Held : it was permissible & necessary to look at the terms of the contracts & to determine from them at what place the debts would be recoverable; applying that test in the present case, the debts were recoverable in London where they were expressed to be payable.—NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE CO. v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1924] 2 Ch. 101; 93 L. " to have been forged." During the currency of the policy pltfs. were induced to lend money to a firm by a document containing a false statement of the firm's assets & liabilities. Before the whole of the loan had been repaid the firm became bkpt., & the pltfs. sued an underwriter on the policy. By the law of the State of New York forgery includes " a false statement of financial condition." A member of the firm had since been convicted in New York of forgery. Pltfs. contended that the word " forged " in the policy must be construed by the law of New York where the loss occurred, & that therefore it was immaterial if the document was not a forgery according to English law :—Held : even if the document was a forged document according to the law of New York the word " forged " was used in the policy merely to describe an existing state of fact & not as a term of art to be construed according to the law of the place where the loss happened, & accordingly the action failed.—EQUITABLE TRUST CO. Statute of Citations, 1531 (c. 9), s. 2, which forbade the ecclesiastical cts. to cite any person out of the diocese where he was inhabiting or dwelling, must be taken to have limited the jurisdiction & not only the power of service of the ecclesiastical cts.; & Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (c. 85), which permits service within or without His Majesty's Dominions, cannot extend the jurisdiction.—GRAHAM v. GRAHAM, [1923] P. 31; 92 L. He then returned to Vancouver & in Apr. 1926, he, with another woman, went to Bellingham in Washington, where they went through a form of marriage before a magistrate & returned to Vancouver. Petitioner filed her petition herein in May, 1929. The law of the State of Oregon requires that pltf. in a divorce action must have been a resident & inhabitant of the State of Oregon one year next prior to the commencement of the suit & the Supreme Ct. of the State has defined domicil, residence & inhabitance as synonymous in relation to divorce proceedings:—Held: on the evidence, resp. did not renounce his British Columbia domicil, he was not in the ordinary meaning of the words a "resident" or "inhabitant" of the State of Oregon & did not acquire a domicil there. Domicil being the governing factor, there was no jurisdiction in the cts. of the State of Oregon to grant a decree of divorce, & petitioner herein should be granted a decree absolute.—BIGGAR v. BIGGAR, [1930] 2 D. In the present case the husband was domiciled in the English legal sense in Oregon when the wife obtained a decree of divorce in California on the ground of wilful desertion:—Held: after receiving expert evidence of the law of Oregon & of the effect of "the full faith & credit clause" of the U.S. Constitution, that under the law of Oregon the wife could not claim a separate residence from that of her husband so as to transfer jurisdiction over a divorce action between them to another state than that of his domicile unless he had given her cause by wilful desertion; &, since the question whether the wife had acquired the right on said ground to establish a separate domicile or residence in California was one going to the root of the jurisdiction of the California Ct., said "full faith & credit clause" would not compel the Oregon Ct. to recognise the California decree without inquiring whether she had acquired said right.—WYLLIE v. MARTIN, [1931] 3 W. 946b. Foreign court without jurisdiction to grant decree of nullity.]—The disability of a foreigner to marry in England otherwise than in accordance with the law of his country as regards matters of form is a disability of which he can divest himself at will & therefore constitutes no objection to the validity of a marriage contracted by him in England in English form. A decree of a foreign ct. invalidating such a marriage is recognisable in England only if the foreign ct. has jurisdiction over the marriage & even then is open to examination. Want of jurisdiction cannot be cured by mere consent of the parties. A decree of a foreign ct. purporting to annul an English marriage under these circumstances is not severable, & if it is incompetent to annul the marriage, neither is it competent to award maintenance or a lump sum in lieu of maintenance.

The husband, a domiciled Cypriot, married a Frenchwoman in England in English form. Afterwards he repudiated the marriage on the ground that it was not in form in accordance with the law of his domicil. Later, on proceedings by the wife in a Cypriot ct., the marriage was declared null on the same ground by consent of the parties, & it was further declared that the husband should pay the wife a lump sum in satisfaction of all claims, including maintenance. The Cypriot ct. by the terms of its constitution had no jurisdiction to annul a marriage. Still later, the wife, finding the husband in England, took out a summons against him for neglect to maintain her under the Summary Jurisdiction (Separation & Maintenance) Acts, 1895 to 1925. The summary jurisdiction domicil of a wife is the husband's domicil & foreign proceedings cannot affect the legal status of a marriage in Canada, where the grounds supporting a foreign decree would not support a decree under Canadian law :—Held : a wife's divorce & re-marriage in Minnesota constituted legal adultery, & furnished ground for the husband's claim for dissolution of the Canadian marriage. — CAMPBELL v. CAMPBELL, [1921] 2 W. 952a. Decree made by mistake—Authority to appear for petitioner withdrawn.]—In this undefended suit the wife petitioned for the dissolution of her marriage on the ground of her husband's adultery in Egypt. Resp., who was engaged in business in Egypt, appeared under protest to the jurisdiction & said that he was domiciled in Egypt. An order was made for the trial of the issue prior to the hearing of the suit, but later resp. abandoned his plea to the jurisdiction. At the hearing the judge drew the attention of counsel to the fact that petitioner had in 1930 petitioned for divorce in Egypt, & had been granted in May, 1930, a decree nisi of divorce in H.M. Ct. at Alexandria; that the husband had given evidence in that suit, though it was undefended, & had given evidence that he was domiciled in Egypt. The hearing was adjourned for the production of the ct. record from Alexandria, which was forthcoming at the resumed hearing:—Held: the proceedings in Egypt amounted to nothing at all, because petitioner had withdrawn all authority from anybody to appear in the cts. of that country. The judge at Alexandria was not informed of that fact, & he proceeded with the suit on the footing that she was represented, whereas she was not. The domicile was really English. In 1923 an action was brought in England to recover a debt alleged to be due from defts. to pltfs., the writ being served on C., & in default of appearance judgment was signed against defts. Pltfs. having obtained a garnishee order nisi to attach a debt due to defts. from third parties in England:—Held: as the debt owing from the garnishees to defts. was governed by English law, payments Act, 1925—Scope of Act.]—Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments Act, 1925, does not permit the registration of a judgment obtained in a province or territory of the Dominion of Canada to which the Act applies unless the judgment is one which could be enforced by action thereon in Alberta. The Act does not make the judgments to which it applies any less "foreign" judgments or any more directly enforceable than before the Act was passed, & does not alter the rules of private international law as to the recognition to be given to foreign judgments. Therefore a judgment obtained in another province, under the rules thereof permitting service ex juris, against a deft. who was not resident or present in that province & did not submit to the jurisdiction of the ct. by contract or appearance is not one which is registrable under the Act. Pltf. in his affidavit sworn on Jan. 30, on which the order was granted, stated that deft. had arrived in Toronto that morning, & that he intended to leave for his own country that night, with intent to defraud pltf. of the damages he had sustained:—Held: in leaving Ontario he was not doing so with intent to defraud pltf., & was therefore entitled to be discharged.—RICE v. FLETCHER (1889), 13 P. 1309a. —— Rights of mortgagee of ship under French hypothèque—Claim for necessaries.]—According to French law, the mtgee. of a ship under a French hypothèque, although he has not the same right of property as that given by Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (c. 60), in respect of an English mtge., has a right to arrest the ship in the hands of a subsequent owner. His claim, however, is postponed to that of a necessaries man.

On a motion to determine priorities between English claimants, in respect of necessary repairs effected upon a French ship & claimants under a French hypothèque upon the ship:—Held: as the rights under the hypothèque must be determined according to French law, which gave greater rights than those given by English law to a necessaries man who had merely the right to sue in rem, the claim of the necessaries men, according to the lex fori by which the question of priorities must be determined, was postponed to the claim of the mtgees.—THE COLORADO, [1923] P. 102; 92 L. 1309b. Rights of "ship's creditors" under German code—As against mortgagee & other necessaries men.]—A German firm supplied bunker coal to a Latvian steamship in a German port under a contract which was said to confer upon them a status known to German law as that of "ship's creditors." The ship was subsequently arrested in England at the suit of other necessaries men & sold by order of the English ct. Further claims were brought against her by a mtgee. & other necessaries men, & these, as well as the German firm, in due course obtained judgment, in default of appearance, against the proceeds of the sale of the ship. On a motion to determine priorities it was argued for the German suppliers of bunkers that the law applicable was the German Commercial Code, by which "ship's creditors" were given priority not only over other necessaries men but also over a mtgee., & also were given the equivalent of a maritime lien, which entitled them to follow the ship or her proceeds into the hands of subsequent owners:—Held: any rights possessed by the claimants under German law were of no value unless & until they were enforced by the arrest of the vessel in the German cts.; the question of priorities must be determined by the lex fori, under which the claimants as necessaries men had no maritime lien or special rights over the heads of a mtgee. or other necessaries men.—THE ZIGURDS (No. 1), [1932] P. 113; 101 L. 1383a. —— —— ——.]—On June 13, 1922, a British steamer & a Finnish steamer were in collision in the river Maas, Holland. After the collision the Finnish owners threatened arrest in a Dutch port. The owners of the British steamer who were anxious that the litigation should take place in England, reluctantly instructed their agents in Holland to provide bail, & although no proceedings were begun, documents in identical terms in the nature of bank guarantees to provide bail if proceedings were commenced within three months were exchanged on July 29 between the owners. On Sept. 6 the Finnish vessel came within the jurisdiction of the English cts., & an action was commenced, & the ship arrested & bail given under protest at the suit of the owners of the British ship. At that time no proceedings had been begun in Holland, but on Sept. 14 an action was commenced in Holland by the Finnish owners. The Finnish owners moved that the writ & all proceedings in the action by the British owners should be stayed, on the ground that their action was oppressive because it required the Finnish owners to give bail in two cts., & was inequitable as a breach of faith of the agreement in Holland:—Held: no legal proceedings having been commenced when the writ was issued in England, & there being no arrest & no bail given prior to the writ now sought to be set aside, there was nothing to debar the British owners from carrying on proceedings in England.—THE JUNO (1922), 128 L. 7a. —— In foreign parts.]—There is no legal duty on the Crown to afford by its military forces protection to British subjects in foreign parts. If, in the exercise of its discretion, the Crown decides to afford such protection, it may lawfully stipulate that it will do so only on the condition that the cost shall be borne by those asking for it.

Pltfs., an English shipping co. trading in the China seas, requested the Crown to provide armed guards to be placed on board their ships as a protection against internal piracy, which was a serious menace at the material time. Armed guards having been provided on the terms that they should be paid for by the pltfs., the latter claimed a declaration that as British subjects they were entitled to protection without payment:—Held: there was no duty on the Crown to afford military protection to pltfs. in foreign parts, & if it did afford protection it was entitled to do so on such terms as it thought fit.—CHINA NAVIGATION CO., LTD. v. A.-G., [1932] 2 K. By subsequent statutes, the powers & authorities of those comrs. were transferred to & vested in "the comrs. for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom." A writ of summons, addressed to "the comrs. for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom," requiring them to appear in an action of debt at the suit of the pltf., was served upon A., one of the comrs., & upon no one else. Upon a motion, on behalf of A., to set aside the writ, & the copy & service thereof, for irregularity, the affidavits disclosed that the action was brought to recover arrears of half-pay alleged to be due to pltf.:—Held: that it was not competent to the ct., in dealing with such a motion, to enter into the consideration of whether the action was maintainable or not; for that, inasmuch as 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 93, s. 9, enabled some actions to be brought against the comrs. by the description contained in this writ, there was no irregularity in the process itself; & to determine, upon a summary application, that the cause of action was not within the statute, would be to deprive pltf. of his right to review their decision by writ of error.

Claim that right of administration of premises vested in Crown—Crown must be represented.]—Government House, Sydney, was built upon Crown land about 1845 as a residence for the Governor of New South Wales, &, with the stables of a former residence, was continuously so used until 1900. From 1900 to 1912, by an arrangement between the Governments of the Commonwealth & of the State, the premises were occupied by the Governor-General, & another residence was provided for the Governor of the State. In 1912, this arrangement having come to an end, the State Government threw the grounds attached to the house open to the public & took steps to convert the stables into a school of music. By the New South Wales Constitution Act, 1855 (c. 54), s. 2, all "waste lands" in the then colony were placed under the control of the local Legislature. The A.-G. for New South Wales, at the relation of residents in the State, filed an information praying for declarations that the house & grounds were vested in His Majesty, dedicated to the public purpose of a residence for the Sovereign's representative in New South Wales, & that neither the Governor of New South Wales nor the Governor in Council had An employee of the Public Works Dept. who had full charge & care of the roofs of Govt. buildings, especially that of the Post Office, & whose duty it was to remove snow & icicles therefrom, passed the building twice on the morning of the accident, first between 8 & 8.30 & again between 9.30 & 10 o'clock, but claims no snow or ice needed to be removed :—Held : the omission of the officer, whose duty it was to keep roofs free of snow & ice, to notice the presence of icicles & to remove them, when he had ample time to do so before the accident, constituted negligence, making the Crown liable for the damage resulting from such careless omission.—JOHNSON v. R., [1931] Ex. C. had not been sent by his employer, had no business there & went solely to amuse himself. C. had been drinking & was under the influence of liquor. He was making a nuisance of himself & when told to go, got into his car and drove straight into the canal, & all were drowned :—Held : as C. had no business on the wharf on the evening of the accident & was there by tolerance, the Crown under such circumstances was under no obligation or duty to him. In order to escape liability it is not sufficient for the Crown to show that the police officer was performing a statutory duty. Petrograd, deposited certain jewelry with the British consul, who was in charge of the embassy premises, & owing to difficulties in the way of the consular officers obtaining money the suppliant agreed that the consul might sell the jewelry & use the proceeds for His Majesty's service. The jewelry was put in a locked leather bag kept in a safe at the embassy. Persons claiming to be representatives of the Soviet Govt. entered the embassy & arrested everybody, & afterwards the bag was found to have been cut open & the contents taken. In 1926 the suppliant claimed the value of the jewelry, but the Foreign Secretary repudiated liability, & the suppliant brought a petition of right. The A.-G., by demurrer, submitted that there was no ground of claim as the facts disclosed showed the absence of negligence, &, secondly, he put in an answer & plea that the claim was barred by the Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48) :—Held : (1) the facts stated in the petition did not negative the possibility of the proof of negligence & the demurrer must be overruled ; (2) the claim was barred by the Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), & there must be judgment for the Crown on the answer & plea relating to that Act.—BUCKNALL v. R. 317 i. Addition of Attorney-General—Action affecting rights of Crown—Petition of right not applicable.]—This was an appeal by the A.-G. for Manitoba from an order by which he was added as a deft. to an action brought against the University of Manitoba to enforce agreements under which pltfs. had agreed to donate certain land as a site for the University on the condition that the University expended a certain amount of money on the grounds & in the erection of buildings. Pltfs. had transferred to the University all of the land originally contemplated except 25 acres which, under an agreement with the provincial Govt., they transferred to the province as a site for a school for the deaf. The agreements with the University were confirmed by an order-in-council which also authorised the execution of the agreement made with the Crown. Pltfs. alleged that these agreements were interdependent, & that there was in reality a tri-partite bargain whereby the Govt. entered into the arrangement previously made by the Governors of the University, furnishing $500,000 for a school for the deaf as part of the general scheme for the erection of educational buildings. This contention the A.-G. denied. Pltfs. asked for specific performance & for an injunction restraining the University from doing anything at variance with its contract with pltfs., & from accepting any money from the Crown for the erection or maintenance of university buildings elsewhere than on said site. No relief was asked for against the Crown ; all that was sought with respect to it was a declaratory judgment that the contracts and order-in-council were not ultra vires :—Held : the appeal should be dismissed, for the reasons : (a) the A.-G. should be a party to this action to represent public interests which he alone can serve. Moreover his presence was necessary to make any declaratory judgment which might be given binding upon the Crown ; (b) petition of right is not the proper remedy in this case, for there was no direct claim made against the Crown ; (c) the case falls within the ambit of cases where the A.-G. is properly joined.—TUXEDO HOLDING CO., LTD. v. UNIVERSITY OF MANITOBA & A.-G. rule as to costs, & on two occasions orders were made requiring appcts. to give security for costs. After the hearing had proceeded for some time appcts. withdrew their claim in view of a prior trial of the invention found to have been made on behalf of the Govt. which, by virtue of the proviso to Patents & Designs Act, 1919, s. 8, entitled the Govt. to make use of it thereafter without payment. On the question how the costs ought to be borne:—Held: (1) under that part of Patents & Designs Act, 1919, which authorised proceedings against a Govt. department, there was no express mention of costs, & the authority to deal with them was derived from the general jurisdiction of the ct., & the ct. had, therefore, no authority to depart from the common law rule that the Crown neither paid nor received costs, unless the special circumstances of the particular case justified it in so doing; (2) having regard to the orders that had been made before the hearing of the motion, & particularly to the two orders for security for costs, the ct. would infer an agreement between the parties that each of them should be treated as ordinary litigants as regarded liability for costs.—Re LETTERS PATENT No. 139,207, Re CARBONIT AKT., [1924] 2 Ch. 53; 93 L. 418a. Evidence—Settlement by Attorney-General on instructions of Foreign Office.]—A statement made to the ct. by the A.-G., on the instructions of the Foreign Office, as to the status of a person claiming immunity from judicial process on the ground of diplomatic privilege, whether as ambassador or as a member of the ambassador's staff, is conclusive.

Deft. in an action in the K. B. Div. for arrears of rent took out a summons to set aside the writ, on the ground that he was a member of the staff of the German Embassy, & filed two affidavits in support of his application. Pltf. applied for leave to cross-examine deft. upon his affidavits. The judge ordered deft. to attend for cross-examination. On appeal the A.-G. attended at the request of the Foreign Office, & on the invitation of the ct. informed them that deft. had been appointed a member of the staff of the German Ambassador under the style of consular secretary, & had been received in that capacity by the British Govt.:—Held: (1) the statement of the A.-G. was binding on the ct., & deft. was entitled to diplomatic privilege; (2) (LORD DUNEDIN) apart from that statement, the order for the cross-examination of deft. would have been justified.—ENGELKE v. MUSMANN, [1928] A. 465a. —— By order of diplomatic superior.]—Deft., who was First Secretary of the Peruvian Legation, took out a policy of insurance against legal liability to members of the public in connection with the driving of his motor car, the policy providing that "the assured . . . shall not in any way act to the detriment or prejudice of the (insurance) co.'s interests," & that "the co. is entitled to take absolute control of all negotiations & proceedings." Pltf. brought an action for personal injuries against deft., & the latter served on the insurance co. a third-party notice claiming an indemnity. An appearance without protest was entered in the action on behalf of deft., &, as the Peruvian Minister forbade deft. to raise the plea of diplomatic immunity, no such plea was inserted in the defence. The jury found a verdict for pltf. for damages, & the insurance co. repudiated liability on the ground that deft. had broken the conditions of the policy by insisting that the plea of diplomatic immunity should not be raised :—Held : the privilege of diplomatic immunity was waived by the entry of appearance without protest.—DICKINSON v. DEL SOLAR, [1930] 1 K. On June 28, 1919, these Powers signed a treaty of peace, but they did not exchange & deposit ratifications of the treaty until Jan. 1920. sg. Calling out militia—Liability for expenses—Whether on Dominion or Province.]—The question referred to this ct. was whether the province of Nova Scotia was liable, or not, to pay to the Dominion of Canada all expenses & costs incurred by the latter by reason of part of the active militia of Canada being called out & serving in aid of the civil power in the county of Cape Breton in 1925, in a case of riot, upon a requisition, made by the A.-G. of Nova Scotia in the form prescribed by s. 85 of the Militia Act, which included an undertaking by him that these expenses & costs would be paid to the Dominion Govt. by the province :—Held : the question should be answered in the negative. Sects. 80 to 90 of the Militia Act repose certain powers in the person occupying the position of A.-G. in the province for the time being, but the exercise of these powers does not in any way depend upon the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor or of the provincial legislature. The Militia Act envisages the A.-G., not in his capacity as A.-G. to His Majesty as the Sovereign Head of the province, but as a person in whom certain powers are vested & on whom certain duties are laid by the statute. These sects. apply to every province & go into operation independently of the scope of the A.-G.'s authority to bind the province in respect of the expenditure of moneys for such purpose. Therefore these enactments do not contemplate a duty to pay, proceeding from a contract between the province & the Dominion. The revenues of the province are vested in His Majesty as the supreme head of the province, & the right of appropriation of all such revenues belongs to the legislature of the province exclusively. Semble : the A.-G., whose duties, in so far as now material, include the supervision of the administration of justice within the province, has no statutory authority to undertake the payment now demanded by the Dominion : the subject matters comprised within the 499a. —— Under Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48)—"Direct loss or damage"—What is.]—Claimants carried on business as motor garage proprietors in Dublin, where they owned & occupied extensive premises peculiarly well suited to their purposes. These premises were taken by the Govt. under powers conferred by statute for the defence of the realm. Claimants, having tried & failed to acquire premises temporarily, took the only reasonable course; they bought other premises, fitted them for use as a garage, & transferred to them all the appliances of their business which they thus continued to carry on as well as they could. When the Govt. retired from possession of the original premises claimants sold the substituted premises. They alleged that the difference between the amount they had expended in acquiring the substituted premises & fitting them for use as a garage on the one hand, & the sum they received on the sale of the substituted premises on the other hand amounted to £3,429. They claimed this sum as an item of "direct loss or damage incurred or sustained by reason of interference with" their "property or business" within sect. 2 (1) (b) of the above Act:—Held: "direct loss or damage" may include consequential damage, & the item claimed could not be entirely excluded as indirect loss, but the amount to which claimants might be entitled in respect thereof must be assessed by the War Compensation Ct.—A. & B. 526a. Power to impose payment for licence to sell ship to foreigner—Recovery of money paid—Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), s. 1 (1).]—The Shipping Controller, purporting to act in pursuance of his powers under Defence of the Realm Regulations, imposed upon suppliants as a condition of granting them a licence to sell a steamship to a foreigner the payment to him by suppliants of £30,800. By their petition of right suppliants alleged that the Shipping Controller had no lawful authority to impose a condition or to exact the payment, which suppliants had paid under protest, & that the Shipping Controller thereby became liable to repay the money to suppliants as money had & received to their use. The petition of right was not brought within one year from the termination of the war or within one year from the exaction of the money. The Crown demurred to the petition, on the ground that the case if founded on the alleged tort of the Shipping Controller was barred by the above sub-sect., & if based on an alleged breach of contract, the proceedings not having been brought within the prescribed time failed under proviso (b) of that sub-sect. A further ground of demurrer was that a petition of right would not lie against the Crown for tort, for the King could do no wrong. Suppliants contended that they were entitled to waive the tort & to sue for money had & received by the Shipping Controller & now in the hands of the Crown, & that their claim so grounded was not a proceeding for or in respect or on account of any act of the Shipping Controller, & therefore was not within the terms of the Act :—Held : the allegation that suppliants' money had been extorted from them by the wrongful act of the Shipping Controller was an essential part of suppliants' case, from which the claim for money had & received arose ; & as such act was one to which the above sub-sect. applied, the petition of right was barred by that sub-sect.—BRISTOL CHANNEL STEAMERS, LTD. v. R. On a petition of right to recover back the money so paid :—Held : (1) the imposition of the condition was illegal, & the payment was not a voluntary payment ; (2) the petition of right was barred by the above sub-sect. ; it was not open to suppliants, by waiving the tort of the illegal exaction & suing for money had & received, to bring the case within par. (b) of the proviso to the sub-sect., for the case fell within the exception to the proviso as being one in which a claim for compensation could have been brought under sect. 2 (1) (b) ; (3) (BANKES & SARGANT, L.JJ.) suppliants failed to bring the case within the proviso upon the further ground that the contracts referred to in paragraph (b) are limited to express contracts, & do not include the fictitious contract to repay money improperly extorted, the implication of which arises upon a waiver of the tort.—BROCKLEBANK, LTD. v. R., [1925] 1 K. By Ministry of Shipping (Cessation) Order, 1921, it was provided that the office of Shipping Controller should cease to exist, & that "All . . . liabilities . . . incurred by the Shipping Controller . . . shall be transferred to the Board of Trade." 534a. —— —— —— ——.]—A British ship lying in a neutral port & laden with a cargo of timber belonging to neutrals of another country was requisitioned during the war by the British Govt. & brought home with her cargo to England without the consent & against the protest of the cargo owners. The timber was then requisitioned by the Controller of Timber Supplies on behalf of the Board of Trade avowedly under Defence of the Realm Regulations, 2B & 2JJ. The owners of the cargo made a claim in the War Compensation Ct. for compensation & contended that it should be assessed under Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), s. 2 (2) (iii.) (a), on the ground that in the circumstances they would but for the Act have had a legal right to compensation:—Held: (1) the regulations did not apply to a seizure of goods of a neutral brought into England against his will; (2) the requisition of the timber was justifiable as an exercise of the royal prerogative right of angary & was, therefore, made "in exercise of" a "prerogative right to His Majesty" within s. 2 (1) (b) of the Act, & inasmuch as that right involved the obligation to pay full compensation to the owner of the property seized, claimants "would have had apart from" the Act a valid claim for compensation by petition of right, &, the Crown admitting that such a claim constituted "a legal right to compensation," compensation was to be assessed according to the principle laid down in s. 2 (2) (iii.) (a) of the Act.—COMMERCIAL & ESTATES CO. OF EGYPT v. BOARD OF TRADE, [1925] 1 K. B. 271; 94 L. J. K. B. 50; 132 L. T. 516, C. A.

558a. Restriction on right of action.]—Reg. 2A (2) of Defence of the Realm Regulations, which provides that "no person shall, without the consent of the Minister of Munition, take . . . any proceedings for the purpose of obtaining an order or decree for the recovery of possession of, or for the ejectment of a tenant of, any dwelling-house" in which a munition worker is living, & which is situate in an area declared by order of the Minister of Munitions to be a "special area," is not authorised by Defence of the Realm Consolidation Act, 1914 (c. 8), s. 1 (1), & is, therefore, invalid.

The only question for decision is whether this portion of the regulation is ultra vires the statute under which it purports to be made, that is to say, Defence of the Realm Consolidation Act, 1914. This depends upon whether it can be said, on any reasonable construction of the statute, to be a regulation for securing the public safety & the defence of the realm, &, particularly under sect. 1 (1) (e), whether it can be said to be a regulation to prevent the successful prosecution of the war being endangered (AVORY, J.).

It is true that the power to make a regulation to prevent the successful prosecution of the war being endangered is of a wide & sweeping character, but I decline to hold that Parliament intended by these general words to give to the executive the right to close any of the King's cts. against his subjects unless they obtained the sanction of a minister to resort thereto (SANKEY, J.).—CHESTER v. BATESON, [1920] 1 K. 927. Substitute the following paragraph & citations :—

By virtue of Assessionable Manors Act, 1844 (c. 105), s. 54, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, as Duke of Cornwall, was absolutely entitled to the mines & minerals within certain manors including that of C. Sect. 55 of the Act empowered the Duke, his agents & lessees, to enter upon all lands within the said manors, & all mines belonging to the Duke, & to open & work the same, & to erect all such buildings, machinery, etc., & do all such acts as should be " necessary or convenient for working the same mines," on making compensation to the surface owners. By sect. 69 it was provided that it should be lawful for the Duke, his agents & lessees, to pull down & remove all buildings, machinery, etc., no longer used for the purposes aforesaid, or to allow the same to remain, & no buildings should, by non-user or otherwise, be deemed to be abandoned, so as to vest any right or title therein in the owner of the land. Deft. was the owner by purchase of garden land adjoining two cottages at W. E. in the manor of C., & was also in possession of a house & garden at W. Z., the site of which she had purchased in 1902. This house was subsequently enlarged from one of six rooms into one of eleven rooms, with an additional wing. These alterations & some improvements to the garden cost £500, & were known to the mineral agent of the Duchy, who remained passive. The Duchy claimed that under the provisions of sects. 55 & 69 of the Act the two cottages & land at W. E. & the house & land at W. Z. had been originally erected, entered upon, & used in connection with the mines at W. E. & W. Z. respectively, & were now vested in the Duchy. From 1846 onwards licences & leases had been granted by the Duchy for the working of the two mines, but neither had been in fact worked for many years. Upon an information by the A.-G. to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales claiming declarations of title to the lands & buildings, & an injunction to restrain the deft. from asserting any title to the same :—Held : (1) the effect of sect. 55 was not to vest any land in the Duchy, but only compelled the surface owner to permit his land to bear certain burdens, & did not divest him of his title ; nor did it follow from the power in that section to erect " buildings " that a power was given to take land for gardens ; (2) the effect of sect. 69 was not to vest any title in the Duchy, but to prevent the surface owner from resuming full enjoyment of land once taken ; & consequently the Duchy had established no right over, or title to, these lands.—A.-G. Legal effect expressly excluded.]—By successive arrangements made before 1913 between an American firm & an English co. the American firm were constituted sole agents for the sale in the United States & Canada of tissues for carbonising paper supplied by the English co. The greater part of these tissues was manufactured for this English co. by another English co. By an arrangement made between the American firm & both English cos. in 1913 the English cos. expressed their willingness that the existing arrangements with the American firm, which were then for one year only, should be continued on the same lines for three years & so on for further periods of three years, subject to six months' notice. This document, after setting out the understanding between the parties, including several modifications of the previous arrangements, proceeded as follows : " This arrangement is not entered into, nor is this memorandum written, as a formal or legal agreement, & shall not be subject to legal jurisdiction in the law cts. either of the United States or England, but it is only a definite expression & record of the purpose & intention of the three parties concerned, to which they each honourably pledge themselves, with the fullest confidence—based on past business with each other—that it will be carried through by each of the three parties with mutual loyalty & friendly co-operation. This is hereinafter referred to as the ' honourable pledge ' clause." Disputes having arisen between the parties, the English cos. determined this arrangement without notice. Before the relations between the parties were broken off the American firm had given & the first-mentioned English co. had accepted certain orders for goods. He accordingly claimed to be indemnified for this loss, which he estimated at £6,000, or, alternatively, to be recompensed in so far as the estate had benefited from his services. The ct. dismissed the action as irrelevant, holding that pursuer's averments did not import a legal claim enforceable against the deceased's executry, in respect (a) that nothing more was disclosed than a mere expression of intention on the part of the deceased to make the pursuer his heir; (b) that, even on the assumption that a definite promise of heirship was averred, such a promise could have been proved only by the writ of the deceased, & here admittedly no writ existed; (c) that no primâ facie case for indemnification on ground of equity was disclosed, the loss averred by the pursuer as a result of the deceased's representations being based solely on hypothetical calculations & not on actual outlay.—GRAY v. JOHNSTON, [1928] S. 388 iv. —— Exercise of option.]—Payment of the purchase-price made by a party purporting to exercise an option to purchase within the time & in the manner provided in the option is insufficient to create a binding contract where acceptance has not been communicated to the other party before the expiry of the option.

Deft., in consideration of payment of £5, gave pltf. "an option of ten days to purchase" his share in a motor-vessel for £150. The agreement provided that the £5 was to be forfeited unless the purchase was completed in the said ten days. Pltf. was given the right to pay the purchase-money into deft.'s bank account at W. instead of paying the same personally to deft. at K. Pltf. told deft. on the telephone that he was paying the money into the bank, & subsequently did pay the money within the ten days & posted a letter of advice which reached the deft. after the expiry of the option. sz. Delivery of goods—Before time laid down in order.]—Applt. sent an order on June 7 to resp. to send him on hire a binder, to be delivered on or about Oct. 1. The order contained a term that it was not to be binding on resp. until received & ratified in writing or by actual delivery of the goods to applt., & that the order might be cancelled by applt. giving notice to resp. by registered letter at least thirty days prior to date for delivery, with a proviso that if prior to that date or six months thereafter applt. ordered a binder from any other person, resp. might by registered notice revive the order, & deliver the binder within thirty days. An agent of resp. was told by applt. that he wished to cancel the order, as he was buying a harvester, & the agent notified resp., but no notice was given by applt. to resp. On Sept. 2, resp. forwarded by rail a binder to applt., & wrote him stating that the binder had been forwarded per rail. The machine arrived, & applt. refused to take delivery, but admitted he had received the letter:—Held: the letter did not amount to a ratification of the order, & a delivery on Sept. 2 did not necessarily imply a delivery pursuant or referable to the stipulation in the contract for delivery on or about Oct. 1, & there was no acceptance of the order.—BLACKETT v. CLUTTERBUCK BROTHERS (ADELAIDE), LTD., [1923] S. 403 ii. —— —— Whether motive for informing material.]—A reward was publicly offered by the Govt. of Western Australia "for such information as shall lead to the arrest & conviction of the person or persons who committed the murders" of two police officers. C. who knew of the offer, gave information that led to the arrest of one person, & the conviction of that person & another for the murder of one of those officers. By petition of right under Crown Suits Act, 1898, C. claimed payment of the reward:—Held: unless petitioner had performed the condition of the offer acting on the faith of or in reliance upon the offer, there was no acceptance of the offer, &, therefore, no contract between the parties.—R. v. CLARKE (1927), 40 C. L. R. 227; [1928] Argus L. R. 97.—AUS.

418a. —— "Orders to be acknowledged by return."]—Defts.' departmental manager orally agreed on their behalf to buy certain goods from pltf. & signed an order form on which was printed the clause, "orders to be acknowledged by return," but this term had not been orally agreed & no acknowledgment was sent to defts. In an action for breach of the contract defts. pleaded that there was merely an offer & no contract, as the only document contained a clause which had not been agreed :—Held : (1) the words on the order form, "orders to be acknowledged by return," were not intended to be words of contract ; (2) the words "by return" related only to the time within which, & not to the method by which, acknowledgment was to be made, & therefore there was a concluded contract, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—WILLIS v. BAGGS & SALT (1925), 41 T. 419a. —— —— Acceptance "subject to the terms of a lease."]—Deft. employed house-agents to let shop premises at 155 High Street, Bromley, Kent, & on Dec. 9, 1930, pltf., after inspecting the premises, offered to take a lease. In reply the house-agents wrote to him on the same day : "Corner shop, 155 High Street, Bromley. Referring to our conversation this morning on the telephone, we confirm that, subject to the terms of a lease, our client is prepared to accept your offer to take the above premises on a 7, 14 or 21 years' lease at a rent of £350 per annum for the first 14 years, rising to £375 for the last 7 years. . . . We have instructed Mr. B.'s solrs. to put the draft lease in hand immediately to forward to your solrs. . . ." The draft lease was forwarded on the same day, & after negotiations as to its terms deft.'s solrs. wrote on Dec. 29, 1930, to pltf.'s solrs. : "We have now received our client's instructions on the draft lease, & he is prepared to accept your client's alterations. We are, therefore, having the lease engrossed, & will forward you a counterpart for execution by your client in due course." This was done, but deft. then refused to execute the lease, & on Jan. 24, 1931, granted a lease of the premises to some one else. On Feb. 3, 1931, pltf. commenced proceedings for specific performance, or, alternatively, damages :—Held : there was no binding contract to grant a lease, as the expression "subject to the terms of a lease" in the letter of Dec. 9, 1930, meant "subject to the terms to be contained in a lease executed by the lessor." It followed that even if deft.'s solrs. were the of deft. to communicate by their letter of Dec. 29, 1930, the fact that deft. had himself agreed to the terms of the lease, so that this letter was a sufficient memorandum of the agreement signed by deft.'s duly authorised agents within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40, there was no binding contract, because the result of the letter of Dec. 9, 1930, was that there could be no concluded agreement until the lease had been executed.—RAINGOLD v. BROMLEY, [1931] 2 Ch. 307 ; 100 L. 420a. —— —— ——.]—LORD CAIRNS indeed seems to have considered that, if the phrase ["subject to the title being approved by our solrs."] meant what the Ct. of Appeal thought it meant, it would follow that the purchaser was at liberty through the medium of his solr. to decline the title from mere caprice ; but none of the judges accepted this extreme view. It is reasonable, they thought, to imply good faith as a necessary ingredient. On the other hand, it seems to be putting an undue strain on the words to construe them, when used by a layman, as connoting not the approval of his own solr., which is their plain, ordinary meaning, but the decision of a ct. of justice after an unknown delay & at an unascertainable cost (MAUGHAM, J.).—CURTIS MOFFAT, LTD. v. WHEELER, [1929] 2 Ch. 224 ; 98 L. H., G. & Co., stockbrokers of equally high standing, appeared as the English stockbrokers of the intended co. D., who was only interested in not being associated with what were commonly known as mining brokers, under no objection to the substitution, did not withdraw his name, & acted as Dublin broker until the co. went to allotment. In an action for the fee :—Held : (1) the complete contract in T.'s letter & D.'s acceptance could not be varied by the covering letter addressed to F. as T.'s agent ; (2) the covering letter was not intended to make the contract conditional upon H. being the English brokers ; (3) even if such a condition were imported into the contract, it could be waived by D., being one for his benefit solely.—MACONOCHY v. TROWER, [1894] 2 I. must offer to the other shareholders the number of the shares offered at the price, & if the offer is accepted the shares shall be transferred to the acceptors. It is provided that "if the shares or any of them are not so accepted the holder may sell or transfer them or any of them at the same or any higher price . . . to third parties approved by the Board." The capital of the T. Co. was £600,000 in 600,000 shares of £1 each, which shares were held in equal parts by the O. Co., & the P. Co. The P. Co. gave notice to the Board that they were desirous of selling 135,000 of their shares to third parties at the price of £2 per share. The Board offered the 135,000 shares to the O. Co., & the O. Co. desired to exercise their option as regards 5,000 shares only at the proposed price. The P. Co. contended that the whole of the 135,000 shares must be accepted, & that the acceptance of 5,000 shares was not good:—Held: the proposed acceptance was not good & the P. Co. were entitled to sell the whole 135,000 shares to third parties; the offer was of the whole 135,000 shares at a certain price per share, & not of 135,000 separate shares at that price; the price to be paid for the whole number of shares might well be less than that payable for a lesser number; & an offer must be accepted according to its terms.—OCEAN COAL CO., LTD. v. POWELL DUFFRYN STEAM COAL CO., LTD., [1932] 1 Ch. 654; 101 L. On Mar. 29, 1928, two of the directors of resp. co. resigned & entered the service of the purchasers. On Mar. 30 resps. gave notice to their foreign agents terminating their engagements. 664a. General rule.]—An agreement of May 6, 1929, between B. & L., who were betrothed, provided that L. should deposit at a bank, in her own name & B.'s, the sum of £4,000, to be re-deposited upon the marriage in a current account in their joint names, & to be used in paying off a mtge. on B.'s premises & in buying him a practice. The amount of the mtge. was stated to be about £1,200. The agreement had been drawn up on the instructions of L.'s brother, who had provided the £400 as her dowry. Despite the terms of the agreement, sums were withdrawn before the marriage, which took place on June 16: On May 15 B. & L. withdrew £1,000, with which the practice was bought, & on June 5 they withdrew £2,350. They also withdrew other sums at later dates. B. had the money, & L. signed documents authorising the withdrawals. The marriage was unhappy, & the parties separated on Sept. 27. There was then only the sum of £150 in the joint account, B. having had £3,850. At the date of the agreement he owed £2,000 to his bank secured by charge on his premises, a fact which he had not told L.'s brother. In an action by L. & her brother to recover the money from B., & asking that the agreement of May 6, 1929, should be set aside or rectified, on the ground that L. was induced by B.'s undue influence to sign the documents authorising the withdrawals :—Held : the agreement must stand, but the doctrine of Huguenin v. Baseley,

In an action for damages deft. pleaded that the contract related to an interest in land & that by Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40 (1), it could not be enforced against him as there was no written evidence of it. Pltfs. contended in answer that there had been part performance by them in looking after the premises and keeping the staff together until the defendant should take possession :—Held : that part of the contract which related to the goodwill, etc., was not severable from the part which dealt with taking over the premises, & that there was no part performance sufficient to take the case out of the statute, & the action failed.—HAWKESWORTH v. TURNER (1930), 46 T. Relying on this promise, the purchaser entered into a written agreement to purchase, & the plot was duly conveyed to him. The co. did not construct the road within a reasonable time, or at all, & the purchaser brought an action claiming damages for breach of contract :—Held : a promise to construct a road, apart from any conveyance of the land over which it was intended to run, was not a " contract for the sale or other disposition of land or any interest in land," & consequently an action would lie upon it, although it was oral, without infringing Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40 (1).—JAMESON v. KINMELL BAY LAND CO., LTD. 845a. Parol warranty to let for certain purposes.]—Pltf., in an action for damages for breach of warranty in connection with the letting to him of certain premises, alleged that as a basis of negotiations which culminated in an agreement in writing whereby defts. agreed to let & pltf. agreed to take the premises in question, defts. verbally warranted to let the premises for dancing purposes. Defts. had no power to let the premises for such purposes without the consent of the superior landlord, & such consent was never in fact obtained. Pltf. took possession under the agreement & expended considerable sums in alterations, & now claimed to recover the amount of such expenses less the sums received by him during his possession of the premises. There was no fraudulent misrepresentation:—Held: pltf. had failed to establish the alleged parol agreement, & even if the evidence had established that before the contract was entered into pltf. had asked whether the premises could be let for dancing & had been answered in the affirmative, it would only have been evidence as to the subject-matter of the contract & could not control, vary, or add to the terms of the written contract.—CRAWFORD v. WHITE CITY RINK (NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE), LTD. 859a. —— What amounts to—Reconstitution of action.]—Defts. on Jan. 9, 1924, agreed to sell a quantity of wood to a partnership firm. The firm, being in financial difficulties, formed a limited co., & duly notified defts. On July 9 it was orally agreed that the new co. should give defts. a cheque & three bills in respect of the indebtedness of the old firm, & that defts. should supply to the new co. the goods sold under the contract of Jan. 9, & accept the new co. as buyers of the goods. The new co. subsequently gave to defts. the cheque & three bills, but defts. did not deliver the goods under the contract of Jan. 9 to the new co. The two partners in the old firm then brought an action against defts. for breach of the contract of Jan. 9. To that action defts. put in a defence signed by counsel in which they pleaded, in par. 3, that it had been agreed by the contract of July 9 that the new co. should give defts. on the following Monday a cheque & three drafts, & that defts. would supply to the new co. instead of to the old firm the goods sold under the contract of Jan. 9, & accept that co. as buyers of the goods. The pleadings were then amended & the action was reconstituted, the partners in the old firm being struck out & the new co. substituted as pltfs., & the cause of action was stated to be a breach of the agreement of July 9. Defts. then amended their defence & relied upon Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4, as a defence to that amended action:—Held: (1) par. 3 of the original unamended defence which was signed by counsel constituted a sufficient note or memorandum in writing of the contract signed by an agent of the party to be charged to satisfy the above sect., inasmuch as (2) the new departure with regard to the parties & the cause of action when the action was reconstituted must be treated as the commencement of the action within the rule in Lucas v. Dixon, No. 859, ante.—FARR, SMITH & CO. v. MESSERS, LTD., [1928] 1 K. 8b. Contract not absolutely recognised—Alleged variation of terms.]—Deft.'s agents in A., on Oct. 14, 1914, telegraphed to deft. in business in O., that they had sold to pltfs. a carload of apples for shipment on opening of navigation. On Oct. 16, deft. answered accepting. On that day the agents sent deft. a bought note, stating the terms of contract as in the telegram, with additions. On Oct. 20, deft. wrote to the agents: "I will return contract, as I find you have worded contract 'opening of navigation 1915.' I will not accept contract on these terms unless they will pay for the goods when packed":—Held: if the terms of the contract had not sufficiently appeared by the telegrams & the bought note, the letter of Oct. 20 would have supplied a sufficient memorandum to satisfy Stat. Frauds, although it contained a repudiation of the contract.—CAMPBELL v. MAHLER (1919), 43 O. L. R. 395; 14 O. W. N. 348; affd., 15 O. W. N. 339.—CAN.

The next day purchaser's solr., in acknowledging the letter, stated: "The simple agreement arrived at herein appears in the first part of your letter, & I suggest that we can dispense with any further agreement":—Held: the latter letter constituted a note or memorandum sufficient to satisfy Stat. A letter signed by a purchaser, addressed to persons who are the vendor's agents, but not mentioning the vendor, & there being nothing creating a contract binding upon the agents personally, is not sufficient to make a contract enforceable against purchaser under Stat. 1178a. —— —— ——.]—In cases under Stat. Frauds the general principle has been, not that the legislature has avoided contracts which are not made in accordance with the forms prescribed in the Act, but merely that those contracts shall only be proved in that particular way. In every single case under Stat. Frauds, except in the case of contracts relating to an interest in land, it has been held authoritatively that part performance of a contract which is within the terms of the Act is not sufficient to preclude the party who has made the part performance, or who has received a part performance, from taking advantage of the Act (ATKIN, L.J.).—Re A BANKRUPTCY NOTICE, [1924] 2 Ch. 76; 93 L. 2011a. —— Knighthood.]—If a contract which is illegal as being contrary to public policy has any element of turpitude in it the parties to the contract are in pari delicto, & if one of the parties to the contract has been defrauded, no action for damages can be maintained by the party defrauded, even though the contract is not of a criminal nature.

The secretary of a charity fraudulently represented to P. that he or the charity was in a position to undertake that P. would receive a knighthood if P. made a large donation to the funds of the charity, & undertook that the title would be conferred if the donation was made. P., relying upon those representations & in the belief that the secretary was authorised by the charity to give the undertaking, made a large donation to the funds of the charity. As P. did not receive the knighthood he brought an action against the charity & its secretary to recover back the money he had paid as money had & received or as damages for deceit or breach of contract :—Held : a contract for the purchase of a title, however the money is to be expended, is an improper & illegal contract, as being against public policy, & as P. knew that he was entering into an improper & illegal contract he could not recover back the money he had paid from the charity as money had & received, nor recover damages from the charity or its secretary, nor claim to repudiate the contract as being still executory & recover back the money paid.—PARKINSON v. COLLINS OF AMBULANCE, LTD. & HARRISON, [1925] 2 K. 2301a. —— Recovery of wages—Contract in breach of Shops Act.]—A shop assistant was employed under a contract of employment which had no reference to holidays. An order under Shops Act, 1912 (c. 3), s. 11 (1), had been made by the local authority for the district in which the shop was situated, suspending the general obligation to close shops on the weekly half-holiday, but only on condition that all the assistants in any shop which remained open were given a holiday of not less than two weeks in each year, & a notice to that effect was affixed in the shop. 2250 i. Goods supplied for illegal purpose—To knowledge of vendor—Smuggling.]—An action brought by a brewery co. against the owners of a dock on the Ontario side of the D. river to restrain defts. from shipping from their dock beer other than that brewed by pltfs. in violation of a contract between the parties was dismissed upon the ground that the ct. should not entertain it. It is common knowledge that for several years there has existed in Ontario an industry known as the "liquor export business" or "rum-running," consisting in the exportation of intoxicating liquors to the United States by smuggling & in contravention of the laws of that country. The ct. is bound to take judicial notice of that which is commonly & publicly known. Viewing the evidence before the ct. in the light of that knowledge it clearly indicated that pltfs. were not only the lessees of a dock & warehouse that were being used by them for "rum-running" purposes, but were the employers or abettors of one of the gang of smugglers that infested the D. river frontier.—WALKERVILLE BREWING CO. v. MAYRAND, [1928] 4 D. In other words, if there is a consent to or a participation by the vendor in the subsequent illegal user or if the contract of sale was for the purpose of enabling the purchaser to carry out the illegal, or immoral, purpose the ct. will not aid either party.—ROSE v. DONALDSON, ROSE v. BRISCOE, ROSE v. YATES, [1931] 3 W. 2359a. Marine insurance—Breach of Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 84, & Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39).]—In 1920 the E. co. & the Y. co. entered into a participation agreement effective as from Jan. 1, 1920, which was a reinsurance treaty binding the E. co. to cede & the Y. co. to accept a participation of all risks therein mentioned of the share retained by the E. co. accepted after Jan. 1, 1920. In Sept. 1921, the E. co. arranged that the N. co. should take over the Y. co.'s position as from Jan. 1, 1920; & in Jan. 1922, an agreement, hereinafter called "the Outwards Treaty," on the same lines & with the same provisions as those of the agreement with the Y. co. was entered into between the E. co. & the N. co. In 1921 the N. co. & the E. co. entered into another participation agreement, hereinafter called "the Inwards Treaty," the N. co. ceding & the E. co. accepting a share of all marine risks. The Inwards Treaty had no provisions for the issuing of policies, or for particulars sufficient to make possible the issuing of policies, to satisfy the provisions of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41). No stamped policies were in fact issued under any of the three agreements, & no premiums were ever actually paid to the N. co., which was credited with the proper proportion of the net premiums received by the E. co. On the compulsory winding-up of the N. co. the E. co. claimed to be entitled to prove for sums paid by it for premiums under the Outwards Treaty, after allowing for sums paid or credited to it by the N. co. under the Inwards Treaty. The Official Receiver rejected the claim on the ground that both treaties were invalid & inadmissible in evidence, because they were contracts of marine insurance which did not comply with the requirements of Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), & Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), & were unlawful; & upon a summons asking for an order that the proof should be allowed:—Held: money paid by the E. co. upon the N. co.'s taking over the reinsurance treaty with the Y. co. could not be recovered on the ground of total failure of consideration, as both parties knew that a continuous breach of the law was contemplated, & as the treaty, assuming it to be illegal, had been partially carried into effect.—Re NATIONAL BENEFIT ASSURANCE CO., LTD., [1931]

First Lien Debentures to rank pari passu with a previous issue of first lien debentures of the same amount; & deft. having interested pltf. in the matter, sent him a letter of indemnity dated Feb. 17, 1922, in these terms: "Regarding the issue of £15,000 First Lein Debentures of the S. Co. at the price of £80 per £100 . . . I understand you are subscribing for £3,000 of the same at a cost to you of £2,400. In consideration of your giving me one-fourth of any profit you may receive on such investment, I hereby indemnify you against any loss thereon. The expression 'any profit' only refers to the redemption price of £100 per £80 which, when received, will show a profit of £20 per bond & the bonus out of the proceeds of any royalties on oil sales from the co.'s properties during the currency of the debentures. . . . The interest you will be entitled to receive from the co. is excluded from the consideration of profits." The debentures were redeemable on July 1, 1925, but they were secured by two debenture trust deeds which gave power to extend the due date, & in Apr. 1925, steps were taken which resulted in its extension to July 1, 1930. In May & June, 1925, a correspondence took place between pltf. & deft. in which pltf. announced his intention of selling the debentures, & deft. protested against this, claiming that they must be kept till their due date. On July 16, 1925, pltf. put the debentures up for sale, & in the absence of other bidders sold them to his son for £25. He then commenced proceedings to recover the amount of his loss, but the House of Lords decided that nothing was payable under the indemnity until the due date arrived. On July 18, 1928, the co. went into liquidation & pltf. having repurchased the debentures from his son, brought these proceedings to recover his loss:—Held: in selling the debentures pltf. had committed a breach of an implied term of the contract & having failed to maintain the position essential to enable deft. to receive the consideration for the indemnity, he had committed a breach of a term going to the root of the contract. 2936a. —— ——.]—By a deed of separation dated Mar. 4, 1920, the husband covenanted to pay a monetary allowance to the wife. By an agreement in writing not under seal dated June 25, 1928, the parties agreed that the terms of the deed regarding the allowance should be varied in certain respects. In Mar. 1929, the wife instituted proceedings claiming arrears of allowance under the deed : —Held : applying the rules of equity which must prevail when there is any conflict or variance between them & the rules of the common law with reference to the same matter, the plea by the husband of the simple contract of June 25, 1928, was a good defence to the wife's action under the deed.—BERRY v. BERRY, [1929] 2 K. In 1927 the trustees of the will offered to redeem both annuities, & after some negotiations were informed by V.'s solrs. that they would advise her to accept £6,000 for redemption, the annuities to be paid in full up to the date of redemption. The trustees sent the solrs. a draft release for their approval. V. having informed her solrs. that she would accept the offer of £6,000, they sent her the release engrossed for her execution, & she executed it on Jan. 12, 1928. —— Absolute contract.]—By a contract dated Aug. 16, 1922, the sellers sold to the purchasers about one thousand boxes of Smyrna sultanas at 60*s.* a cwt. c.i.f. London, to be shipped from Smyrna by steamer to London during Sept. 1922. Smyrna at the date of the contract was in the occupation of the Greeks. On Sept. 9, 1922, it was taken by Turkish forces & shipment became impossible, with the result that the sellers did not ship any of the goods. The buyers claimed damages, & the dispute went before arbitrators, who stated a case for the opinion of the ct. under Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 7. The sellers said that they were excused from performance on the grounds (1) that the contract became illegal when the port of shipment came under Turkish control, as a state of war at that time existed between England & Turkey ; & (2) that a state of circumstances had arisen which made the contract impossible of performance & that differed totally from the conditions with reference to which the contract was made :— Held : mere impossibility of performance did not discharge a party where performance was not naturally impossible, unless such a state of affairs had arisen as displaced the fundamental basis of the contract ; in the absence of any strike, war or force majeure clause, the buyers were entitled to damages for failure of the sellers to deliver.—Sargant (W. The exceptions clause excepted "restraint of princes, rulers & people." The ship arrived at Batoum, & notice of readiness to load was given, & the lay days began to run. Owing, however, to a dispute between the Russian & Italian Govts. the ship was ordered by the port authorities to leave Batoum & also Russian waters, & accordingly the ship went to Constantinople. Subsequently permission was obtained to load the ship at Batoum, & she returned after being absent from the port a little over a fortnight. The owners subsequently claimed demurrage from the charterers, on the basis that the lay days continued to run during the period the ship was absent from Batoum:—Held: interference by the Russian Govt. did not amount to such an illegality as to excuse the performance of the contract.—CANTIERE NAVALE TRIESTINA v. HANDELSVERTRETUNG DER RUSS. 3224 i. Importation restricted by Government.]—Applt., a manufacturer of yeast, entered into a written contract under which he undertook to supply a certain portion of his output to resp. during 1927. Clause 8 of the contract provided that "in the event of legislation being passed . . . which may in any wise restrict or prohibit the sale of yeast in any quantity or to any class or race, this agreement shall become void," while clause 9 provided that "if such legislation . . . relates only to imported yeast then your selling price . . . may be increased at your option" in certain respects. In June, 1927, by Act 24 of 1927, the importation of yeast into the Union was prohibited except with the permission of the Comr. of Police. Applt. thereupon repudiated the contract, pleaded it was null & void under clauses 8 & 9 thereof :—Held : legislation prohibiting the importation of yeast did not fall within the terms of either clause of the contract, inasmuch as it did not prohibit or restrict the sale of yeast.—COMPRESSED YEAST, LTD. v. DISTRIBUTING AGENCY, LTD., [1928] App. D. 301.—S. 3784b. ——.]—Pltf. granted a bill of sale over certain furniture to a moneylender, &, as she was unable to pay him the first instalment when it became due, defts. agreed to advance to her £1,000 on another bill of sale for the purpose of paying him off & of having her furniture released from the first bill of sale. Pltf. accordingly received a cheque for £1,000 from defts. & after receiving it she executed the second bill of sale, which stated that the consideration for it was £1,000 paid to pltf. In an action by pltf. to restrain defts. from disposing of the furniture comprised in the second bill of sale, pltf. relied on Bills of Sale (1878) Amendment Act, 1882 (c. 43), s. 8, & she contended that the real consideration was the payment off of the moneylender & the release of her furniture from the first bill of sale :—Held : the consideration for the second bill of sale was the loan of £1,000, & as a cheque was a good payment until dishonoured there was no need to state in the second bill of sale that the payment was by cheque, & therefore, as the consideration was correctly stated in the second bill of sale, the action failed.—D'USEZ v. TRAFFICS & DISCOVERIES, LTD. arrear were due had been paid to the tithe-owner in full. After the passing of the Act, the overseers, purporting to act under Tithe Act of 1837 (c. 69), s. 8, demanded payment of the arrears of rates from the occupiers of the land, who paid them, & were allowed the amount thereof by their landlord, the owner of the land, out of the half-year's rent next becoming due. Subsequently thereto a half-year's tithe rentcharge became payable by the landowner. The landowner claimed to deduct therefrom the amount which he had allowed to the occupiers out of their rent in respect of the arrears of rates paid by them:—Held: having regard to the Act of 1891, s. 6, the payment of the arrears of rates by the occupiers was a voluntary payment, & they were not entitled to deduct the amount so paid from their rent; consequently the landowner was not entitled to deduct the amount which he had allowed to the occupiers from the tithe rentcharge due by him.—Re TITHE ACT, 1891, ROBERTS v. POTTS, JONES v. COOKE, [1894] 1 Q. 4534a. —— ——.]—By certain military regulations officers in the Royal Air Force were on demobilisation entitled to a gratuity varying in amount according to circumstances. If their names were on a certain list, called the Emergency List, they were only entitled to a gratuity at a lower rate than if they were not on that list. Deft. was a demobilised officer of the Royal Air Force. Pltfs., who acted as Govt.'s agents for the payment (inter alia) of gratuities to demobilised officers of that force, in ignorance of the fact that deft. was on the Emergency List, but also in forgetfulness of the regulation which provided that the gratuities of officers on the Emergency List should be paid at the lower rate, & not appreciating the materiality of an officer being on that list, paid deft. his gratuity at the higher rate to which he would have been entitled if he had not been on that list. More than a year afterwards, & before notice of the mistake, deft. spent the money. In an action to recover back the excess payment as money paid under a mistake of fact;—Held: pltfs. could not recover on the grounds that plfts.' mistake was not a mistake of fact causing the payment; & that as deft. had been led by plfts.' conduct to believe that he might treat the money as his own, & in that belief had altered his position by spending it, pltfs. were estopped from alleging that it was paid under a mistake.—HOLT v. MARKHAM, [1923] 1 K. 4590a. —— —— To bank named by principal—Money returned by bank to agent.]—Pltfs. in London sold to a New York co. a quantity of Belgian francs to be delivered to defts. as the purchasers' agents in Brussels on Dec. 31, at a price to be paid in dollars on the same day in New York, & the purchasers instructed defts. to pay the francs when received to the C. Bank. On Dec. 30 bkpcy. proceedings were commenced against the purchasers in New York & a receiver was appointed, & on the same day the purchasers cabled to pltfs. not to pay the francs to defts., as they, the purchasers, were unable to complete their contract. Before that cable arrived pltfs. had already paid the francs to defts., & defts. had paid them to the C. Bank. Pltfs. then requested the C. Bank to return them, & the C. Bank returned them to defts., with an explanation that they did so for the purpose of cancelling defts.' payment to them. In these circumstances defts. claimed that, the money having been returned to them, they were entitled to hold it on behalf of their principals, & refused to pay it over to pltfs., who brought an action to recover the francs as being money had & received by defts. to their use:—Held: (1) as at the time pltfs. paid the francs to defts. the purchasers had already repudiated their contract, although pltfs. did not know that fact & consequently had not accepted the repudiation, pltfs. were under no legal obligation to pay, &, having paid under a mistaken belief of legal liability, they would have been entitled to recover the money back if they had discovered their mistake before defts. had paid it to the C. Bank; (2) the effect of the money being returned by the C. Bank was to restore pltfs. to the same position as that which they occupied before defts paid it away, & that position was unaffected by the fact that

This was in accordance with an established practice, by which the councillors superintended the laying out of moneys in their respective divisions. Deft. granted several orders on the treasurer to different persons as for "work done," which were paid, & it appeared that such work, though contracted for, had not been performed. There was no evidence, however, of any fraud or collusion on deft.'s part, or of any gain to himself, except the usual charge to the corpn. of the commission on such moneys as were expended:—Held: there could be no recovery on the common counts, for deft. had received no money.—CHATHAM TOWNSHIP CORPN. v. HOUSTON (1868), 27 U. 4908a. ——.]—The element of personal confidence which renders a contract unassignable is not confined to cases where the purchaser relies on the personal skill of the vendor or manufacturer, or where the manufacturer relies on the personal idiosyncrasies of the buyer with regard to his requirements or with regard to his performance to the covenants other than his obligation to pay. Where the ability of the buyer to pay is the subject-matter of personal confidence, the contract is just as much taken out of assignability as where the manufacturing skill of the seller is the subject-matter of the buyer's personal confidence.

Defts. entered into a contract with H. to supply him with 10,000 tons of coal, the delivery of which was to be extended over two years. H. had been carrying on the business of a coal merchant for some years, the business consisting of carting coals from defts.' depots round the streets of a certain district & there selling it to the working classes by weight in relatively small quantities, it being a regular practice to give short credit. H. assigned the contract to pltf., who up to the time of the assignment had no experience of the coal trade:—Held: there was that degree of difference between H.'s & pltf.'s knowledge of the business, which, having regard to the nature of the business, constituted an element of personal confidence in the matter personal to H. which made the contract unassignable.—COOPER v. MICKLEFIELD COAL & LIME CO., LTD., COOPER v. RAYNER (1912), 107 L. 5122a. Actor.]—Applts., theatrical producers, agreed to engage resp., an American actor, to play one of the three leading comedy parts in a musical play about to be produced at the London Hippodrome for six weeks certain at a salary of £55 per week, & the contract contained a provision prohibiting resp. during the continuance of his engagement from acting elsewhere without the consent of the applts. Resp. objected that the part assigned to him was not one of the three leading comedy parts &, on the refusal of applts. to recast him, declined to appear in the play & sued applts. for damages for breach of contract. At the trial of the action before a judge & jury the jury found for resp. for £1,000 damages for loss of publicity & for three weeks' salary, & judgment was entered accordingly. The Ct. of Appeal affirmed the verdict & judgment except as to the salary :—Held : (1) upon the construction of the contract, it bound applts. to give resp. an opportunity of appearing in public in a part answering the stipulated description; (2) it was competent to the jury, having regard to the character of the contract, to give damages to resp. for loss of publicity.—HERBERT CLAYTON & JACK WALLER, LTD. v. OLIVER, [1930] A. 5168a. Agreement to "exert influence"—No obligation to pay money if necessary.]—Deft. co. made an agreement with pltf. co. to use such "rights" as they might possess & such influence as they could exercise to procure a third co. to deliver to pltfs. a percentage of the crude oil produced from a concession belonging to the third co., in which defts. had the preponderating shareholders' vote. No delivery of oil from the concession in question was made by defts. to pltfs., &, in answer to an inquiry by pltfs. as to when delivery was to begin, defts. replied that they were not in a position to make delivery as they could not enforce it against the other members of the third co. without making a payment to them & that they were under no obligation to make such payment. In an action for breach of contract defts. admitted that if they gave consideration there would be no impossible barrier to their getting the oil:—Held: as defts. could not use their preponderating vote in the third co. to dispose of a product of the third co. in order to satisfy an obligation of their own to the detriment of the interests of the minority shareholders, & as the word "rights" in the agreement did not mean that defts. were bound to exercise their right of spending money to procure the oil, the action failed.—GENERAL ASPHALT CO. v. ANGLO-SAXON PETROLEUM CO., LTD. 5168b. Contract to print bank-notes—Implied duty not to use plates for unauthorised purpose.]—Pltfs., a Portuguese bank, made with defts., who were printers, a contract which provided that defts. should print the authorised notes for the bank, the plates being left in defts.' possession & being intended to be available only for the purposes of the bank. By means of an elaborate fraud defts. were induced by an unauthorised person to print from the plates a large quantity of notes & to deliver the notes to him, & the result was that these notes were put into circulation. In consequence of the fraud pltfs. honoured a large number of the spurious notes, & on learning the facts they found it necessary to withdraw all the genuine notes of the same issue from circulation as they had, at that time, no means of distinguishing the genuine from the spurious notes. In an action for breach of contract, negligence, or conversion:—Held: it was an implied term of the contract that there was to be no use of the plates for any purpose not authorised by pltfs., & there was an absolute duty on defts. not to print or deliver notes of pltf. bank without the authority of the bank, &, even if defts. were bound only to take reasonable care to avoid such acts, defts. had, on the facts, fallen short of the standard of care required by the special nature of the business, & pltfs. were entitled to recover.—BANCO DE PORTUGAL v. WATERLOW & SONS, LTD. Pltf. & his brother slept one night at the baths, & when they woke up they found that they had been bitten badly by insects, proved afterwards to be bugs:—Held: there had been a breach of an implied warranty that the beds or couches supplied for the use of customers should be reasonably fit for the purpose, & defts. owed a duty to pltfs. to take reasonable care that no bugs or other dangerous insects should infest their premises.—SILVERMAN v. IMPERIAL LONDON HOTELS, LTD. Deft. advertised tickets for sale & limited the number to which each person was entitled to four. Pltf. who had been commissioned by a large number of people to secure tickets, employed men who stood with others in a queue all night waiting for the office to open. Others who came later took up positions ahead of pltf.'s men, with the result that some of them failed to secure tickets:—Held: the number of tickets sold was but a reasonable shortage of the estimated number & as there was no express contract between the parties & pltf. had not proved a custom binding upon deft. to preserve the order of priority in the queue, the claim must fail.—BELL v. NEW ZEALAND RUGBY FOOTBALL UNION (1931), 26 M. 394a. —— Purchaser for value.]—(1) Pltf., as lord of the manor of Great Tey, which he acquired by purchase in 1923, brought the present action of detinue to recover possession of certain ancient ct. rolls of that manor, which were of mere historical interest & which before his purchase pltf. had seen advertised for sale by deft., who, having purchased them in 1902, from one P., a waste paper dealer, had commenced advertising them for sale ten years before the commencement of the present action:—Held: in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it must be presumed that P. acquired the rolls lawfully in the ordinary course of his business from either the lord or the steward of the manor, & as the position of pltf.'s predecessor in title as trustee of the rolls, while they remained in his possession, did not make it illegal for him to part with them to a stranger, who came under the same obligation as the lord to produce them, pltf. was not entitled to recover the rolls.

Held: (2) even if an action of detinue would lie, yet, upon the true construction of Limitation Act, 1623, s. 3, the words "goods & chattels" were mentioned only in reference to actions of replevin, & that as the action was an action of detinue & the cause of action, namely, the assertion by deft. of an adverse title by advertising the rolls for sale, arose more than six years before the commencement of the action, the action was barred by the statute.—BEAUMONT v. JEFFERY, [1925] Ch. 1; 93 L. 1533a. —— Remainder to his heir-at-law—Rule in Shelley's Case applies.]—By his will testator, among other devises of freeholds & copyholds, devised his two copyhold houses, gardens, & premises situate in the parish of B., & also a piece of copyhold land adjoining, to his nephew G. for life without impeachment of waste, & after his death he devised the same premises to the "heir-at-law" of the said G. There was no special custom of descent in the manor of B. affecting these copyholds:—Held: the use of the expression "heir-at-law" did not exclude the operation of the rule in Shelley's Case, which accordingly applied, & G. was entitled in customary fee simple for an estate to him & his heirs according to the custom of the manor.—Re HACK, BEADMAN v. BEADMAN, [1925] Ch. 633; 94 L. 2032a. Estate tail in undivided share—Interest in personalty.]—Where before 1926 an undivided share in copyhold land was the subject of an estate tail, the enfranchisement of such copyhold land after 1925 can result in turning the estate tail into an absolute interest; & where, by reason of the statutory trusts under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), such land becomes personalty, the absolute interest into which the estate tail is turned is an interest in personalty.—Re PRICE, [1928] Ch. 579; 97 L. 2032b. Equitable joint tenancy in copyholds—Subject to rentcharge—Vesting of legal estate.]—On July 5, 1802, Bryan Abbs & another trustee who predeceased him were admitted to certain copyhold plots A., B. & C. upon trust out of the rents & profits to raise & pay an annual rent of £7 10*s.* to Harrison & his heirs & subject thereto in trust for Wilson & his heirs. Many years after Bryan Abbs' death his customary heir H. C. Abbs, since deceased, was admitted to A. & C., but no one was admitted to B.; so that on Dec. 31, 1925, the best right to admittance was in the customary heirs of H. C. Abbs & Bryan Abbs. On the same date the equitable title to the land stood vested in Thompson & Collins as joint tenants in fee, subject to the equitable rentcharge then vested in Aylmer, subject to proof of his title. On Jan. 1, 1926, the Law of Property Acts came into operation & the copyhold plots were enfranchised. The ct. being asked to determine in whom the legal estates in the land & the rentcharge vested:—Held: (1) under the 1922 Act, Sched. XII., para. 8 (b), the freehold estate in the land vested in the first instance in the personal representative of H. C. Abbs & the customary heir of Bryan Abbs as trustees, Bryan Abbs having no known personal representative; (2) either under the 1922 Act, Sched. XII., para. 8 (d), or under the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part II., paras. 4, 6 (d), the rentcharge vested as a legal rentcharge in Aylmer or other the persons entitled thereto; (3) on the rentcharge becoming a legal rentcharge the trustees became bare trustees with no longer any active duties to perform; (4) under the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part II., paras. 3, 6 (d), the initial vesting in the trustees was divested, & the legal estate subject to the legal rentcharge vested in Thompson & Collins as joint tenants in fee simple; (5) sect. 36 of the 1925 Act did not come into operation until after the vesting provisions had done their work. It then merely attached a trust for sale to the joint legal estate in Thompson & Collins. It did not previously attach a trust for sale to the initial estate in the trustees so as to put the divesting provisions of the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part II., out of operation. Still less did it bring in the undivided share provisions of the 1925 Act, Sched. I., Part IV. —Re KING'S THEATRE, SUNDERLAND, DENMAN PICTURE HOUSES v. THOMPSON & COLLINS ENTERPRISES, [1929] 1 Ch. 483; 98 L. J. Ch. 109; 140 L. T. 463.

16a. Dramatic work—No "first publication" within 1911 Act, s. 1 (3)—Owner entitled to substituted copyright under 1911 Act, sched. 1.] —Under Dramatic Copyright Act, 1833 (c. 15), a foreign author dwelling outside British territory was entitled to secure dramatic copyright within the British Empire of the first performance of his play given in this country. By an agreement in writing dated June 30, 1898, G., the author & sole proprietor of the right to perform a certain play, granted to pltf. the sole & exclusive right to perform, or have performed, the play in Great Britain & Ireland. On Sept. 22, 1898, G.'s agent wrote to pltf. stating that the play had been first performed in Great Britain on a certain date & at a certain place:—Held: a copy of the letter of Sept. 22, 1898, the original having been lost, was admissible as evidence in a copyright action between pltf. & third parties who claimed a right to produce cinematograph films of the play under an agreement for value with G., dated Sept. 6, 1919, to prove that the first performance of the play took place in this country as stated in the letter since, (1) being written by G.'s agent, it constituted an admission by G., a person who, although not named on the record, had a substantial interest in the result, & (2) it constituted an admission by defts.' predecessors in title.

(3) An entry in the register of first performances of dramatic productions at Stationers' Hall is admissible in evidence as a public register. If such an entry is incorrect, the party producing a certified copy of it may be precluded from relying on it as primâ facie proof of a right to produce or reproduce the play to which it relates, but it can be regarded by the ct. as corroboration of other evidence of title.

(4) 1911 Act, s. 1 (1) (a) & s. 1 (3), which provide that copyright shall subsist in every dramatic work if it has been first published in His Majesty's dominions, but that the performance in public shall not be deemed to be publication, prescribe conditions for the future, but do not inflict them on past events so as to destroy existing rights.

(5) Where the owner of dramatic copyright possessed [by assignment] the sole right to perform, or permit the performance of, a certain play before 1911 Act came into operation he acquired, by sect. 2 (1) (b), coupled with sects. 24 & 35 of the Act, & sched. 1 to the Act, the right to the cinematograph & film rights of that play also.

An American corpn. made a film & sent a negative & two positives of it to an English co., who made further copies of the film & handed them to another English co., who let them to a British exhibitor. The American corpn. & the two British cos. were interworking organisations linked together by complex agreements, & they all three shared in part of the receipts from the exhibition of the film by the exhibitor. The exhibitor in exhibiting the film, infringed pltf.'s copyright:—Held: (6) the American corpn. & the two British cos. had actively directed, counselled or aided the infringement by the exhibitor, & had infringed pltf.'s rights within 1911 Act, s. 2 (1), the operative effect of which sub-sect. is extended & not limited by sect. 2 (2) & (3).

(7) Where an infringement of copyright is proved under 1911 Act, s. 2 (1), the question of knowledge of infringement by the infringer does not arise except possibly with reference to the exemption from penalties for infringement provided by sect. 8 of the Act.—FALCON v. FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO., LTD., [1926] K. Such a letter is not contrary to public policy as being in restraint of trade.

43b. —— Single sentence.]—Pltf. had, since 1925, dealt with the treatment of the human face, & had advertised extensively in connection with that treatment. He claimed to have the copyright in a slogan in connection with those advertisements. The phrase was, "Beauty is a social necessity, not a luxury." Sometimes there were variations in the words used. Sometimes the words "youthfulness," or "good looks," or "youthful appearance" were substituted for "beauty." In May 1926 deft. inserted an advertisement containing the phrase "A youthful appearance is a social necessity." Some years before 1925 an advertiser had used a similar phrase, "Beauty is a modern necessity":—Held: (1) the only originality, if any, in pltf.'s phrase consisted in the substitution of the word "social" for the word "modern," & pltf.'s phrase was not an original composition; (2) although copyright might subsist in an advertisement, to quote a piece of a sentence from a literary work was too small a matter to afford ground for an action for infringement of copyright; (3) the doctrine de minimis non lex curat applied, & the matter in which copyright was claimed was too small for the ct. to attach any importance to it.—SINANIDE v. LA MAISON KOSMEO (1928), 139 L. Nearly all the words were selected by the managing director of the co. In 1922 defts., who were carrying on a similar business, circulated price lists which were practically copies of the price lists of pltf. co., the words used in pltf. co.'s catalogue & price lists to indicate the style of type being copied in defts.' price lists without alteration. Pltf. co. commenced proceedings for an injunction to restrain infringement of copyright in their catalogue & passing off of goods which were not their goods as being their goods. On the question of copyright defts. contended (inter alia) that pltfs.' catalogue was a design or collection of designs capable of registration under Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 (c. 29), & 1919 (c. 80), & not the subject of protection under 1911 Act:—Held: on the question of copyright the contentions put forward by defts. failed, & an injunction restraining infringement of the copyright of pltfs. in their catalogue was granted.—MASSON SEELEY & CO., LTD. v. EMBOSOTYPE MANUFACTURING CO. broadcasting stations, & to carry on any other business ancillary, incidental, or conducive thereto. Under the terms of their licence & a supplementary agreement pltfs. were required to transmit efficiently every day a programme of broadcast matter to the reasonable satisfaction of the Postmaster-General. They were not allowed to alter their memorandum as to objects without his written consent. He might revoke their licence if they failed to transmit satisfactory programmes, & within one month from their ceasing to hold the licence they were bound to pass a special resolution for voluntary winding up. Their profits from all sources beyond a 7½ per cent. cumulative dividend on their paid-up capital belonged to the Postmaster-General. Nine months after the licence, with the approval of the Postmaster-General pltfs. began publishing the Radio Times every Friday, including therein the advance daily programmes for the ensuing week Sunday to Saturday. These programmes gave the day & hour of each performance, the artist's name, appropriate headings for items or groups of items, & translations of unfamiliar foreign titles of songs or music. The preparation, arrangement, & editing of the actual programmes involved considerable time, skill, labour & expense, although the preliminary work of fixing the days & hours, engaging the artists, & choosing the items had all been done some time beforehand. Defts. having selected & copied numerous items from a set of advance programmes so published, pltfs. sued for infringement of copyright:—Held: (1) whether there was or was not copyright in an individual programme, there was undoubtedly copyright in the compilation of the seven advance programmes; (2) although the programmes were subject to the approval or veto of the Postmaster-General, who had power to revoke the licence if they included improper matter, they were not a work "prepared or published by or under" his "direction or control" within 1911 Act, s. 18, & so long as pltfs. were allowed to trade & publish them, the copyright belonged to pltfs. & not to the Crown. 111a. —— Wolf-cub head for Boy Scouts' pole—1911 Act, s. 22.]—Apart from 1911 Act, s. 22, a model of a wolf-cub's head produced from a mould in papier mache & intended to be displayed as their totem on the tops of poles by the Boy Scouts Assocn., is an artistic work in which copyright would subsist under that Act. But, as the model consisted of "features of shape, configuration, pattern, or ornament applied to any article" of manufacture or artificial substance by an industrial process, & was therefore a design within Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 93, as amended by Patents & Designs Act, 1919 (c. 80), s. 19, & consequently was capable of being registered under the Act of 1907 &, further, was not a design which was "not used or intended to be used as a model or pattern to be multiplied by any industrial process," it was by Copyright Act, 1911 (c. 46), s. 22, excluded from the operation of that Act & not the subject of copyright thereunder.

In an action by pltfs. for infringement of copyright which they claimed in the model, against the defts. who admittedly had copied & reproduced the model:—Held: for the reasons stated above, pltfs. had no copyright in the model under 1911 Act, & the design not having been registered as a design under the Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), the action failed.

Semble: if pltfs. had had copyright in the model, the defts. could not successfully plead, under 1911 Act, s. 8, that they had no reasonable ground for suspecting the subsistence of copyright in the model owing to the absence of registration marks under Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), under which they alleged that in their view of the law the model was capable of registration, since, relying upon that view, they abstained from making any inquiries whether copyright in the model was claimed.—PYTRAM, LTD. v. MODELS (LEICESTER), LTD., [1930] 1 Ch. 639; 99 L. J. Ch. 381; 143 L. T. 227; 46 T. L. R. 290.

Grant of licence giving sole & exclusive right of representation—Assignment.]—Applt. was the composer of the music of a French opera, an English version of which was produced at a London theatre on the terms of an agreement of Mar. 23, 1905. By this agreement, made between the composer (the applt.) & the authors of the opera (thereinafter called "the licencors") of the one part & the proprietor of the theatre (thereinafter called "the licencee") of the other part, after reciting that the licencors had delivered the play to the licencee, with the score of the music, with a view to its production in London & elsewhere "on the terms hereinafter mentioned," the licencors granted the licencee the sole & exclusive right of representing the play in the U.K., America, & the British Colonies & Dominions. The agreement further provided that the copyright in the music of the play should remain the property of applt.; that on the failure of the licencee to produce the play in London within a certain time all rights of representation as aforesaid should revert to & become again the absolute property of the licencors; that the licencee should pay to the licencors as royalties certain percentages of the gross profits; that the licencee should keep proper books showing the gross receipts of the theatres at which the play should be represented, & that the licencors should be entitled to inspect the books, so as to enable them to verify the amount of the percentage payable to them. Resps., in pursuance of a permission granted to them by a theatrical co., to whom on the death of the licencee the benefit of the agreement had been assigned by his exors., gave a broadcast performance of the opera at their studio in London. 308a. —— —— ——.]—Pltf. was the sole authoress of & owner of the copyright in a novel called "The Scarlet Pimpernel." In 1903 in collaboration with her husband, she composed a dramatic version of the novel. By an agreement dated June 10, 1903, pltf. & her husband, as authors, granted to defts. T., as theatrical managers, the right of production of the play during a then forthcoming tour, & at a first-class West End London theatre, for two years; & the agreement further provided that if the production took place within that period then "the entire rights for the United Kingdom, the United States of America, & the Dominion of Canada in the play became theirs inalienable, & they shall present it when & where they will within the countries aforesaid," paying to the authors 5 per cent. on the gross weekly takings. Defts. fulfilled the specified condition. In an action by pltf. claiming a declaration that she had the sole right to perform the work by means of cinematograph films:—Held: the entire performing rights in the play became vested in defts. by virtue of the agreement, & when 1911 Act came into operation the right so vested included the right to the cinematograph reproduction of the play; & therefore pltf.'s action failed.—BARSTOW v. TERRY, [1924] 2 Ch. 316; 93 L. 367a. —— ——.]—A. brought an action against B., the editor of a newspaper, for stating in his paper that pltf. was the author of a certain libellous article which had appeared in the paper. To this action B. pleaded by way of justification, that the matter from which the article had been drawn up had been furnished by pltf. in letters written to him by deft. Upon the action coming on for trial, deft. submitted to a verdict of 40*s.* in favour of pltf. Deft. afterwards showed some of the letters to third persons. Upon a motion before answer, to dissolve an injunction which pltf. had obtained to restrain the publication & production of the letters, the ct. refused the application; more especially as upon the motion for the injunction pltf. had produced an affidavit to the effect that the verdict was taken under an arrangement that the letters should be delivered up, which affidavit was not sufficiently contradicted on the motion to dissolve. —PALIN v. GATHERCOLE (1844), 1 Coll. 565; 4 L. Part XIa.—Application to British Possessions.

See 1911 Act, ss. 25–28.

389a. Irish Free State.]—(1) As by 1911 Act, s. 25 (1), that Act extended throughout His Majesty's dominions, except to a self-governing dominion which did not adopt it, & s. 35 (1) restricted the meaning of "self-governing dominion" to the dominions which are therein specifically named, Ireland not being included, the Act was in force in the Irish Free State when the constitution came into operation, & consequently by art. 73 thereof continued of full force & effect until it was repealed by the Industrial & Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, of the Irish Free State. Sect. 174 (1) of that Act which provides that rights acquired under the Act of 1911 before Dec. 6, 1921, shall not be affected by the repeal, preserves rights the inception of which was before that date although they have been assigned after it.

The Judicial Committee, although of opinion that the judgment of the Supreme Court was wrong in holding that the appellants were not entitled to any remedy in respect of an infringement in 1926 of their rights under 1911 Act, advised that the judgment should be discharged only so far as it dealt with costs, as the Copyright (Preservation) Act, 1929, passed by the Irish Free State legislature after the grant of special leave to appeal, while enacting that rights under 1911 Act were to be deemed always to have subsisted in the Irish Free State, provided by sect. 4 that no remedy or relief should be granted in respect of any infringement which had there taken place before the passing of the Act.

(2) A local authority commits an infringement under 1911 Act, s. 2 (1), if a band which it has engaged to perform in public plays, without consent, copyrighted musical works which are included in a programme approved by the local authority, & the performance is for the "private profit" of the local authority, within sect. 2 (3), although any profit resulting will be applied to the relief of ratepayers.—PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY, LTD. v. BRAY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1930] A. h 1. Effect of Canadian Copyright Act on rights of British subject.]—In the case of a British subject, whether resident in Canada or not, the protection which he is given under sect. 4 (1) of Copyright Act, R. S. C., 1927, is not dependent upon or qualified by the provisions of the Revised Convention of Berne of 1908, to which, & the protocol thereto of 1914, Canada gave its adherence in 1923. Therefore there is infringement when a newspaper article, of the class which is the subject of copyright, written by a British subject & first published in His Majesty's Dominions is reproduced in a Canadian newspaper, without the consent of the author or the assignee, if any, of his rights, even though it cannot be protected under the Berne Convention because no notice expressly forbidding its reproduction has been given.—GRIBBLE v. MANITOBA FREE PRESS CO., LTD., [1931] 3 W. 489b. —— Effect of 1911 Act, s. 1 (2).]—The word "authorise" in the above sub-sect. is superfluous, & there is nothing in the sub-sect. which cuts down the liability under sect. 2 (1) of the Act, in respect of an infringement of copyright.

Defts., who were the occupiers of a dancing hall, engaged on the terms of a written agreement a band to provide music therein. The agreement provided that the band should not, in the music played, infringe any copyright, & should be liable for damages & costs caused by any infringement. There was also a notice posted in the hall that "only such music as may be played without fee or licence is allowed to be played in this hall." On one occasion the band played certain music, the copyright of which belonged to pltfs., without pltfs.' licence; but defts. did not know, & had no reasonable ground for suspecting, that this infringement would take place. In an action by pltfs. for damages & an injunction:—Held: on its true construction, the agreement between defts. & the band constituted the latter the servant of defts., & not independent contractors; the band on the occasion in question were acting in the course of their employment; defts. were liable under 1911 Act, s. 2, for the infringement of copyright; & pltfs. were entitled to damages & an injunction.—PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY, LTD. v. MITCHELL & BOOKER (PALAIS DE DANSE), LTD., [1924] 1 K. 513a. —— —— ——.]—Pltfs. were the publishers of a magazine, published in America at frequent intervals, called "Adventure." Defts. proposed to publish a monthly magazine called "Hutchinson's Adventure Story Magazine." In an action by pltfs. to restrain such publication:—Held: where any one adopted a descriptive word, as pltfs. had done, they must not object if other persons made use of it, as descriptive of similar articles; pltfs. had no monopoly of the word "Adventure," & on the evidence no real confusion existed between pltfs.' & defts.' periodicals.—RIDGWAY CO. v. HUTCHINSON (1923), 40 R. P. C. 335.

523a. —— Title of film.]—(1) Pltfs. who were the trustees of the will of the late S. H., the author of a play called "The Younger Generation," brought this action to restrain defts., Film Booking Offices, Ltd. & Universal Pictures, Ltd., from selling, letting for hire or exhibiting in public a cinematograph film under the title "The Younger Generation" in such a way as to represent to the trade or public that such cinematograph film was a film version of the play by S. H. The play was first performed in Manchester in 1910, & in 1912 it was produced in London & subsequently was performed at intervals by touring companies up to the commencement of the action. The play was published in 1910 & the demand for copies was still active. There was a continuing demand for the play in respect of amateur performances. Three films having nothing in common with the subject-matter of, & from their nature unlikely to be confused with, the pltfs.' play had been shown in this country under the title "The Younger Generation" in the years 1913, 1915, & 1926. Defts.' film was released for exhibition to the public in Sept. 1929:—Held: the evidence fell short of establishing the fact that the title "The Younger Generation" used in connection with a film meant in the mind of the film-going public a film based on the play of that name by S. H.

(2) Defts., Universal Pictures, Ltd., by their defence denied all liability to pltfs., & at the same time paid five guineas into ct. in satisfaction of any claim for damages & offered to submit to an injunction or to give an undertaking in the terms claimed by pltfs. Upon the undertaking being drawn up these defts. refused to pay pltfs. the costs of a motion for an interlocutory injunction which they contended should be apportioned between defts. Accordingly the action was continued against these defts. No order was made on the motion except costs to be costs in the action. The action against both defts. was dismissed with costs.—HOUGHTON v. FILM BOOKING OFFICES, LTD. (1931), 48 R. P. C. 329.

523b. —— ——.]—Pltf., whose professional name was L. W., wrote a sketch which was first produced under the title "Washing a Car." He sent it to G. C., a comedian, who thought he could improve it, & only left in eight passages of pltf.'s, the dramatis personæ & the mise-en-scène. The sketch so altered was produced, & after a time was called "The New Car." In 1928 it was acted for six months by G. C., & in 1930 was acted by him at a Command Performance. Afterwards a paragraph appeared in a newspaper: "The King's Enjoyment. . . . It was George Clarke in Laurie Wylie's capital sketch 'The New Car' who first set the fun going." Pltf. had received payment for the scenic rights of the sketch. Defts. then made a film which in fact did not follow the lines of "The New Car," but in May, 1930, they sent a notice to the newspapers: "The man who made the Queen laugh, George Clarke, in 'His First Car.' Come & see the talking version. A. P. D. C. Picture." The writ was then issued by pltf. for damages for passing off & for an injunction; defts. paid £5 into ct. in satisfaction of all claims. On a motion in the action defts. undertook not to repeat the advertisements until trial. Defts. shortly after giving the undertaking, made an announcement at a trade performance that their film "His First Car" had no connection with a sketch by Laurie Wylie entitled "Washing a Car" or "The New Car." Pltf. had parted with the performing rights of his sketch for five years from 1928. The judge held that pltf. was the owner of the copyright in the sketch "The New Car," & entitled to prevent defts. from passing off their film as a film version of that sketch. The injunction was not granted owing to what was said by the directors of deft. co. at the trial preventing its necessity, but an inquiry was ordered as to damages:—Held: in substance the sketch renamed "The New Car" was the production of pltf., who was entitled to the copyright in it; there had been an attempt to pass off & the action was rightly made a passing off action, &, though by what had taken place at the trial an injunction had become unnecessary, pltf. was entitled to go to trial. The inquiry as to damages was not necessary, however, as the £5 paid into ct. was sufficient, having regard to the fact that pltf. had parted with his film rights for five years & that there had appeared shortly after the advertisements an account in the newspapers of the interlocutory proceedings, & having regard to the announcement made at the trade show. Decision affirmed, with the exception that the order for an inquiry as to damages was held to be unnecessary.—SAMUELSON v. PRODUCERS DISTRIBUTING CO., LTD., [1932] 1 Ch. 201; 101 L. J. Defts. afterwards published & sold two drawings, which were made by alterations of pltf.'s original drawings, but which had titles different from the titles of pltf.'s drawings. 152a. Summoning "regular jurymen" — Improper.]—(1) Semble : for a coroner before an inquest is held to take a person who is subsequently to serve on the jury, & privately investigate with him any of the facts of the case, whether or not it can be shown that there was anything in the nature of discussion between them, is contrary to public policy, " misconduct " at common law, & ground for quashing the inquisition under Coroners Act, 1887 (c. 71), s. 6 (1).

(2) Semble : the fact that at a view, by a coroner's jury, of the scene of a collision where two vehicles had collided, a police constable, who had already been sworn & given evidence at the inquest, was allowed to point out to the jury where had been the marks in the roadway of the two vehicles which were said to have met, & where one of the vehicles had come to rest, the distance between which points the jury measured, is ground for quashing an inquisition under sect. 6, sub-sect. (1), of the Coroners Act, 1887 (c. 71), s. 6 (1).

The ct. expressed the following opinions :—

(3) The practice of summoning eleven jurors to serve on a coroner's jury from a list or panel of only sixteen or seventeen persons in a large city so that some of the same persons are summoned time after time, is very objectionable, & is contrary to the principle of the jury system. The practice of calling a small panel of " regular jurymen," whether or not it is illegal, is improper.

(4) Probably, as a general rule, it is better that a coroner should not accompany his jury upon a view of the scene of a collision between vehicles or upon a view of the vehicles. (5) But if he does so accompany the jury he should carefully abstain from any discussion of the case with the jury at such view.

(6) A coroner is not bound to allow others, such as those concerned or their representatives, to be present on such a view by the jury. It is a matter for his discretion.

(7) There is no statutory requirement that the depositions of a witness at the coroner's ct. should be read over to him. The High Ct. has no right to add such a requirement to those which Parliament has enacted. But if a coroner thinks there is any uncertainty as to what a witness meant, & particularly if a witness, before he signs his deposition, requests that it be read over to him, the coroner ought to do so. No doubt a witness would be entitled to refuse to sign until this had been done.—R. v. DIVINE, Ex p. WALTON, [1930] 2 K. B. 29; 99 L. J. K. B. 433; 143 L. T. 235; 94 J. P. 129; 46 T. L. 156a. -.]—The failure by a coroner at an inquest to view the body makes the inquest a nullity, & is not merely an irregularity giving the ct. a discretion as to whether it will order another inquest, &, since on such failure there has been no inquest, the ct. will quash the proceedings before the coroner & order an inquest to be held.—R. v. HASLEWOOD, Ex p. MARGERISON, [1926] 2 K. 153 i. Essential to jurisdiction of coroner.]—Resp., a justice of the peace, began on Oct. 17, 1929, an inquiry into the death of a young woman who had died from taking strychnine on Aug. 20, 1929. Her body had been subjected to a post-mortem examination by the Govt. medical officer, & buried soon afterwards, without having been viewed by resp. At the inquiry, resp. was asked by counsel, on behalf of a subpœnaed witness, whether he had received a request in writing, but refused to give any such information. Upon application by the witness in question for a prohibition directed to resp., & restraining him from proceeding further with the inquiry:—Held: it was immaterial whether he had received a written request to hold such inquest, since his jurisdiction arose independently of it; notwithstanding the abolition of the coroner's jury by Inquests of Death Act, 1866, s. 5, he had no jurisdiction to hold the inquiry except super visum corporis; & appct. was entitled to prohibition.—R. v. STAINES, Ex p. O'CONNOR (1930), S. guinea per annum, whose subscriptions are not more than one year in arrear, are allowed to vote by proxy, other governors voting in person; & all annual subscriptions become due on Aug. 1, in each year. Pltf. was a candidate with two others at an election on Dec. 29, of a medical officer; a governor tendered proxies for him which were refused by the chairman, on the ground that they appeared by their dates to have been signed before the persons signing them had become subscribers. The proxies were signed by persons who each, about the time of signing, paid over one guinea as a first subscription to the infirmary, to the governor who tendered the proxies. Just before the meeting this governor gave the treasurer of the infirmary his cheque for the whole amount, the treasurer giving him a separate receipt for each guinea in the name of each person subscribing. The chairman declared one of the other two candidates elected, although pltf. would have the majority of votes, if his proxies had been received. The governor who tendered the proxies that same day stopped the payment of his cheque, but three days afterwards he paid the amount to the treasurer. Pltf. subsequently entered the infirmary, & claimed the right to do the duties of medical officer. Defts., who were the chairman & honorary secretary of the governors, resisted his claim & used force sufficient to turn him out, for which pltf. brought an action for assault at a county ct. The judge found a verdict for defts., on the ground that the subscriptions of those persons, whose proxies were rejected, had not been paid before the election, but reserved the question for the ct. on appeal:—Held: these facts constituted payment before the election by the persons whose proxies were rejected, but the validity of the proxies might depend upon the intention of those persons to be annual subscribers; also pltf., not having been in fact elected medical officer, could not question the validity of the election in this action.—WORTHINGTON v. HARGOOD (1873), 27 L. 935a. —— ——.]—Pltfs. were by statute entrusted with the control & management of part of the navigations of the Rivers Ouse & Foss, in Yorkshire, with power to charge such tolls, within limits, as the corpn. deemed necessary to carry on the two navigations in which the public had an interest. In 1888 the corpn. entered into two agreements with the firm of H. L. & Sons. By the Ouse agreement the corpn. covenanted to allow the firm, their successors & assigns, the right to carry cargoes on the Ouse in consideration of the annual payment of £600 in place of the authorised dues & charges, with a proviso that there should each year be refunded to the firm, their successors & assigns, the difference between the £600 & the amount ordinarily charged on the traffic actually carried. By the Foss agreement the firm covenanted to pay the corpn. £200 per annum for twenty years as a composition for the ordinary tolls, & the corpn. covenanted to allow the firm, their successors & assigns, the free use of the Foss navigation, on payment of £200 per annum in lieu of tolls, for such further term or terms as the firm, their successors or assigns, might from time to time desire. Defts. were the successors of H. L. & Sons:—Held: the agreements were ultra vires, because during their currency, which depended on the wishes of defts., the corpn., no matter what emergency might arise, had disabled itself from exercising its statutory powers to increase the tolls so far as might be necessary; &, being ultra vires at the date of their execution, the agreements did not become intra vires by reason of estoppel, lapse of time, ratification, acquiescence or delay.—YORK CORPN. v. LEETHAM (HENRY) & SONS, LTD., [1924] 1 Ch. 557; 94 L. the running of omnibuses along the route of any tramways which the corpn. should be authorised to construct. There were in fact two such authorised tramway routes. The expenditure in connection with the running of these authorised tramways could, under the corpn.'s statutory powers, be borne out of the city fund. The corpn. began an omnibus service in pursuance of their statutory powers, but it appeared that for a very small portion of the omnibus route, namely, for a distance of forty yards, the service of omnibuses ran outside the boundaries of the city, joining up with the tramway routes slightly further on, & that the expenses in connection therewith were borne by the city fund. An action was commenced by a ratepayer for a declaration (inter alia) that the running of these omnibuses over this particular stretch, & payment of the expenses in connection therewith out of the city fund, was ultra vires the statutory powers of the corpn., & ought to be prohibited. The question at issue was whether, so far as the forty yards stretch was concerned, the corpn. were entitled to spend moneys out of the city fund in connecting an authorised route of omnibuses outside the city with a route of omnibuses within the city boundaries. Under their statutory powers the corpn.'s service of omnibuses along the route of a tramway outside the city which they were authorised to construct was a part of their tramways undertaking, & they were also authorised to apply the city fund in discharging the expenses in connection with the tramways undertaking:—Held: the expense of running omnibuses over the forty yards so as to connect the two routes was an expense fairly incidental to the tramways undertaking, & that it was not ultra vires the corpn.'s statutory powers to expend any part of the city fund in working & running the omnibuses over the forty yards which connected the two services, & which were branches of the corpn.'s tramways undertaking.—A.-G. v. LEEDS CORPN., [1929] 2 Ch. 291; 99 L. Purchase of land for street widening & pleasure garden—Subsequent use of pleasure garden for street widening.]—A local authority bought land in 1896 for the purposes of: (a) street widening; (b) making new streets; (c) providing public walks & pleasure gardens. The land was conveyed to the local authority for the purposes authorised by the Public Health Acts. A plan & specifications were submitted to the Local Government Board, & subsequently the scheme was carried out in accordance with the plan & specifications. The pleasure gardens were surrounded by railings, & were not dedicated or open to the public. In 1927 the local authority resolved to utilise one of the pleasure grounds for the purpose of street widening & providing a parking place for motor cars. Objections were raised by some of the occupiers of adjoining premises, & an action was brought to restrain the local authority from carrying out their resolution:—Held: as one of the purposes for which the land was acquired was street widening, the local authority was not acting ultra vires in using part of the pleasure gardens for that purpose.—A.-G. v. SUNDERLAND CORPN., [1929] 2 Ch. 436; 45 T. 1127b. —— ——.]—Pltfs. claimed to have a written contract dated Mar. 17, 1921, under which they agreed to erect fifty-eight concrete workmen's dwellings for deft. borough rectified so as to give effect to what was alleged to have been the common intention " of the parties " when the contract was drawn up. The contract was entered into between H. & deft. borough & was under their seal. H. subsequently assigned the contract to pltfs. : —Held : even if there were a common mistake the contract of Mar. 17, 1921, could not be rectified because, having regard to sect. 174 of the above Act, deft. borough were incapable of entering into a contract with H. other than a contract under seal, so that when a tender was made by H. & accepted, there was no contract come to.—HIGGINS (W.), LTD. v. NORTHAMPTON CORPN., [1927] 1 Ch. 128 ; 96 L. Part XVI.—Dissolution.

1603a. On equity of redemption—Companies Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 296.]—In 1899 a limited co. mortgaged to the trustees of a will certain leasehold properties by way of absolute assignment subject to the equity of redemption. In 1910 the co. went into liquidation, & in 1913, the trustees having called in the mtge., the co. made default & the trustees appointed a receiver. In 1916 the co. was dissolved, the income of the property being at that time insufficient to meet the mtge. interest, & nothing was done in respect of the equity of redemption as the liquidator considered it to be of no value. The value of the property having since largely increased, the surviving trustee claimed to be entitled to the property absolutely, & the Crown claimed the equity of redemption as bonâ vacantia:—Held: (1) Cos. Act, 1929 (c. 23), s. 296, did not apply, as that sect. was not retrospective, & (2) after the disappearance of the legal entity which had the right of redemption the Crown was entitled to the property as bonâ vacantia.—Re WELLS, SWINBURNE-HANHAM v. HOWARD (1932), 101 L. 71a. Question of repairs—Under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17).]—Deft. was the tenant of a tied public-house with living accommodation, of which pltfs. were the landlords. In 1910, the house was let to deft. at a rent of £75 per annum for three years. At all material times the ratable value was £68. After certain intermediate tenancies at rents less than two-thirds of the ratable value, deft. in Dec. 1920, took from pltfs. a new lease : "To hold the said premises with the appurtenances unto the tenant from Mar. 25, 1920, for the term of seven years . . . at the yearly rent of £120." The reason for the increased rent was a trade revival which had caused a great improvement in the licensed trade of the house. The conditions of the new lease as to repairs were more onerous for the tenant than those of the old. In an action by the landlords for rent, the tenant contended that the repairing clause amounted to a prohibited increase :—Held : the question as to repairs could only be decided by the county ct., & the High Ct. had no jurisdiction on this point.—BRAKSPEAR (W. 139a. —— —— Issue of summons before leave obtained—Irregularity.]—On Jan. 30, 1924, a tenant of a dwelling-house within the Rent Restrictions Acts lodged two plaints in the West London county ct., the one under sect. 12 (3) of the Act of 1920 for apportionment of rent, & the other under sect. 14 (1) of the same Act for certain sums paid by him in respect of rent which, as he alleged, was irrecoverable by his landlord. These sums were, by sect. 8 (2) of the Act of 1923, recoverable on or before Jan. 31, 1924, but not afterwards. The claim for apportionment could regularly be brought in the West London ct., but the claim for repayment could not be brought in that ct. without the leave of the judge or registrar on an application supported by an affidavit. No affidavit was sworn until Feb. 5, 1924. Notwithstanding this the plaint was entered, a plaint note under the seal of the ct. was given to pltf., & a summons was issued, all bearing the date Jan. 30, 1924. By Ord. 7, r. 2, a summons to appear to a plaint shall be dated of the day on which the plaint was entered, & the date thereof shall be the commencement of the action :—Held : (1) the irregular entry of the plaint & issue of the summons before the necessary leave had been obtained did not deprive the county ct. of jurisdiction to hear the action, but the irregularity could be waived by deft.; (2) as deft. had appeared to the summons & raised a defence in no way challenging the jurisdiction of the ct., he had waived the irregularity; the action must therefore be taken to have commenced on Jan. 30, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—PRINGLE v. HALES, [1925] 1 K. B. 573; 94 L. J. K. B. 458; 132 L. T. 785, C. A.

Duty of judge to make order—On proof of right to possession.]—The words "may order" in 1888 Act, s. 138, are enabling words only, but where the legal right of a landlord to the possession of premises has been established it is the duty of the judge, notwithstanding the permissive form of the sect., to make an order for possession. In exercising the discretion given him as to the period for the coming into operation of the order, the judge must fix a period reasonably adjusted to the circumstances of the case, including the nature & term of the tenancy. The county ct. judge in two cases of weekly tenants whose tenancies had been validly terminated by notice to quit, refused to make any order in one case, & in the other, while making an order, postponed its operation for twelve months:—Held: this was not a judicial exercise of his discretion, in either case.—SHEFFIELD CORPN. v. LUXFORD, SAME v. MORRELL, [1929] 2 K. Upon a contract for the sale of real property at a price exceeding £500 the vendor brought an action in the county ct. against the purchaser, claiming a declaration that deft. had forfeited the deposit paid under the contract by deft. to stake-holders, who were not parties to the action, & that he was entitled to receive payment of the deposit from the stake-holders. No other claim appeared in the plaint or the summons or the particulars of claim:—Held: the county ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the claim, (1) on the above ground, & (2) on the further ground that the claim was for partial specific performance of an agreement for the sale of property within 1888 Act, s. 67, where the purchase-money exceeded £500, the amount limited by that sect.—DE VRIES v. SMALLRIDGE, [1928] 1 K. 244a. Partnership—Action for dissolution or winding up—Effect of denial of partnership on jurisdiction.]—(1) The jurisdiction conferred by 1888 Act, s. 67 (7), which gives the county ct. power to entertain actions for the dissolution or winding-up of a partnership where the property does not exceed the value specified, is not limited to an action in which the existence of the partnership alleged by pltf. is admitted by the deft., but extends to an action in which it is not so admitted.

(2) An action in which pltf. claims a declaration of partnership between himself & deft. & an account of his share of the profits of the partnership business is in substance an action for the dissolution or winding up of a partnership within 1888 Act, s. 67 (7).

(3) Where, contrary to 1888 Act, s. 75, an action in the county ct. for the dissolution or winding up of a partnership is brought in a district other than that in which the partnership is being carried on, the county ct. judge before whom the action comes has a discretion under 1919 Act, s. 10, to hear & determine it.—R. v. LAILEY, JUDGE, Ex p.

Deft. alleged in defence that the sum claimed had been paid to him as wages; &, further, that the county ct. had no jurisdiction, the question between the parties being a dispute concerning wages within above sect. which could only be dealt with by a superintendent thereunder. At the trial it was found as a fact that the sum claimed had been lent to deft., & that there was no real dispute concerning wages: —Held: the county ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the action notwithstanding the sect., inasmuch as that ct. had all along had jurisdiction to entertain an action for money lent & the sect. did not either expressly or by implication exclude that jurisdiction; &, further, the jurisdiction of the superintendent under the sect. did not arise until a party to the dispute called him to decide it, & here no party had called upon him to do so.—STURLEY v. POWELL, [1930] 1 K. 373a. On jurisdiction of county court—Reduction of claim for damages—Alternative claim for injunction.]—Where an action, commenced in the High Ct., has been transferred to a county ct. under 1919 Act, s. 1, the effect of sect. 4 of that Act is to give the county ct. jurisdiction to deal with the matter equal to or the same as that of the High Ct.

Pltf. & deft. entered into an agreement, which provided that in the event of any breach thereof by deft. he should pay to pltf. in respect of each such breach a sum of £150 by way of agreed & liquidated damages. Pltf. alleged that deft. had broken the agreement, & he brought an action in the High Ct. claiming the sum of £150 & an injunction. Pltf. afterwards applied, under 1919 Act, s. 1, to have the action remitted to a county ct., reducing the money claim to £90, & claiming an injunction in the alternative. The master made an order for remittal. Pltf. then delivered particulars of claim, asking for £90 damages or in the alternative an injunction. He admitted, however, that the real object of the action was to obtain an injunction. On the action coming on for trial the county ct. judge declined jurisdiction on the ground that in substance the action was for an injunction alone. On appeal to a Div. Ct., that ct. held that the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to entertain the action, & sent it back to him for trial:—Held: the decision of the Div. Ct. was correct.—DAVEY v. ROBINSON, [1923] 1 K. B. 563; 92 L. J. K. B. 336; 128 L. T. 513; 39 T. L. R. 163; 67 Sol. Jo. 246, C. A.

with leave to defend, the judge of the county ct. has the same jurisdiction as a judge of the High Ct. over the costs of the whole proceedings, & he may order them to be taxed on the High Ct. or on the county ct. scale. Defts. filed a defence denying negligence & afterwards gave pltf. notice of an application to dispense with a jury. The application for trial without a jury was made under the above sect. The county ct. judge, without giving any reasons for his decision, ordered the trial of the action without a jury, & pltf. appealed against that order & alleged that the learned judge had not properly exercised his discretion :—Held : the above sect. did not give the county ct. judge an absolute power to order the trial of an action without a jury; the sect. gave him a discretion which must be exercised judicially; in this case there were no proper materials on which the learned judge could exercise his discretion judicially; it would not be a proper exercise of the learned judge's judicial discretion to dispense with a jury merely because it was inconvenient; on the other hand it is not necessary for the judge to give his reasons for dispensing with a jury, but there must be some grounds for so exercising his discretion.—WINN v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL (1923), 130 L. 497b. —— —— Onus on party objecting to jury.]—On an application in the county ct. for an order that an action be tried with a jury the county ct. judge is bound in law to make the order asked for, unless the party desiring to dispense with a jury under the above sect. establishes to his satisfaction that the action could be as conveniently tried without a jury. Further, the fact that the lists are congested is not a ground on which the county ct. judge is entitled to suspend a litigant's right to trial by jury.—CALCRAFT v. LONDON GENERAL OMNIBUS CO., [1923] 2 K. 648a. —— Sum deposited by claimant to goods less than value of goods—More than judgment debt & costs.]—Goods which had been taken in execution under a county ct. judgment were claimed by a claimant. The execution creditor did not admit the claim & claimant deposited with the bailiff under 1888 Act, s. 156, the sum of £26 which was considerably less than the value of the goods claimed, but was more than sufficient to cover the judgment debt & costs of the execution. The money was paid into ct. by the bailiff, who remained in possession of the goods, & an interpleader summons was issued. Before the return day of the interpleader summons the execution creditor gave notice that he admitted the title of claimant to the goods, & the bailiff withdrew from possession. Upon the taxation of the costs the bailiff claimed possession fees up to the date when the execution creditor admitted claimant's title, upon the ground that under sect. 156 he was bound to remain in possession until the amount of the value of the goods was deposited with him :—Held : as the £26 was deposited with & taken by the bailiff under sect. 156 of the Act, he must be deemed to have taken it upon the assumption that it represented the amount of the value of the goods, & therefore he had no right to remain in possession or to possession fees after the date of the deposit.—NEWSUM, SONS & CO., LTD. v. JAMES, [1909] 2 K. 783a. Order for payment of possession fees of high bailiff—Under Ord. 27, r. 1 (2).]—(1) A Div. Ct. has jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the decision of a county ct. judge who, under the above sub-rule has, on the application of the high bailiff, made an order against the execution creditors, who have directed the high bailiff to withdraw, for the payment of his fees.

On May 15, 1924, the high bailiff of a county ct. under a warrant of execution purported to levy upon the goods of judgment debtors at their premises, & put a man in possession. The sheriff was then in possession of the goods under process of an earlier date, but not to the knowledge of the high bailiff, as the county ct. judge found. The high bailiff on taking possession received from judgment debtors a document which stated that in consideration of his withdrawing from possession they authorised him at any time to re-enter & undertook not to remove any of the goods. On June 12, 1924, the high bailiff on the instruction of the judgment creditors withdrew from possession. The execution was ineffective, except in so far as it brought the parties into negotiation with a view to a settlement. The high bailiff made an application to the county ct. judge under the above rule, for an order for payment by the judgment creditors of his fees for keeping possession from May 15 to June 12. The county ct. judge found that the high bailiff did not withdraw from possession, but was in actual possession & not in mere walking possession of the goods, & made an order for payment of the fees claimed:—Held: (2) the possession of the sheriff did not in the circumstances prevent the high bailiff from taking & keeping such possession as would entitle him to claim fees; (3) there was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge that the high bailiff did not withdraw from possession, but kept actual as distinct from walking possession; & therefore the order of the county ct. was right.—A. p i. —— Assisting police.]—On a charge of burglary the accused stated he was instructed by a police officer to take part in a burglary in order to assist the police in bringing a criminal to justice. He informed the police before the burglary as to where & when it was to take place, accompanied the real burglar in his breaking into a house & taking goods, then instructed the police where the goods were to be found & gave information leading to the arrest of the criminal. There was conflict between the evidence of the accused & that of the police officer who instructed him. The magistrate convicted the accused, stating he was relieved from weighing the evidence of the police officer & the other witnesses, as the evidence showed that accused helped to commit the crime :—Held : reversing the decision of the magistrate, if accused's evidence is believed, what he did was not with the intention of committing felony, but with the intention of helping the police.—R. v. GILMORE (1930), 43 B. The recipient, on reading them, believed they were written by a woman. He did not go to the place where the accused lived, & no meeting between them took place. The accused was charged with attempting to procure the commission of an act of gross indecency by the recipient of the letters with himself. At the trial the jury were asked to say only (i) whether the accused was the writer of the letters, & (ii) if so, whether the letters amounted to an attempt to procure the commission of the offence charged. He was not informed of his right to trial by a jury on appearing before the ct., before the charge was gone into, but he was so informed afterwards, when all the evidence had been heard, but before the ct. had announced their decision. Deft. protested twice by his solr. that he could not at that stage be put to this election, but on being informed by the chairman that if he did not elect, the case would be sent for trial, he stated by his solr. that he would be dealt with summarily. Deft. was then convicted & fined:—Held: the proceedings were a nullity as the giving of that information to the person charged on his appearing before the ct., "before the charge is gone into," in accordance with Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 17, is a condition precedent to the validity of the subsequent proceedings. He was placed under arrest by an executive officer of the ship, &, some days later, by which time the vessel had arrived in Torbay, he was apprehended by the Devon police & charged before the justices, who committed him for trial at the Devon quarter sessions. The indictment charged an offence contrary to Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 17 (1) (a), committed on the high seas. Prisoner was arraigned & pleaded not guilty & a jury was impanelled, but quarter sessions declined to proceed with the indictment upon the ground that Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 115, which was said to give them jurisdiction, did not extend to offences committed in estuaries or rivers in Scotland, & that the offence charged was properly triable only by the Scottish cts.:—Held: quarter sessions had jurisdiction to try the indictment inasmuch as it alleged an offence which, by virtue of Naval Discipline Act, 1866 (c. 109), was committed within the jurisdiction of the Admlty. of England, & therefore, being an offence mentioned in Larceny Act, 1861, it was triable, under sect. 115 of that Act, in the county where the offender was apprehended.—R. v. DEVON JJ., Ex p. PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS DIRECTOR, [1924] 1 K. 1676a. —— Application of Criminal Justice Act, 1925 (c. 86), s. 44.]—Pltf. having left his wife & two children, his wife obtained a maintenance order under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39), for the payment by him of a weekly sum. Pltf. having failed to comply with the order, his wife made complaint to a magistrate at D., which was within the county of Chester, that £19 12*s.* 6*d.* was then in arrear under the order, & thereupon the magistrate issued a warrant, addressed to each & all of the constables of the county of Chester, commanding them to apprehend pltf. & convey him before a ct. of summary jurisdiction at D. to be dealt with according to law. The warrant showed on its face that £19 17*s.* was payable by pltf. & was in the form prescribed by the Bastardy (Forms) Order, 1915, but it did not contain the words "unless the said sum & all costs & charges be sooner paid" which were directed to be inserted in such warrants by the Bastardy (Forms) Amendment Order, 1921. The warrant was delivered to deft., the superintendent of police at D., & some time later pltf. was arrested by a constable acting under deft.'s orders. Pltf. was taken in custody through the streets & placed in a cell by deft.'s order. At the time the arrest was effected the warrant was in deft.'s possession at the police station & was not in the possession of the constable who made the arrest. Pltf.'s father immediately after the arrest tendered £19 17*s.* to deft. & asked for his son's release. but deft. refused to accept the money, Pltf.'s solr. then sent a letter to deft. enclosing the £19 17*s.* & demanding pltf.'s release. but deft. did not open the letter & pltf. was kept over-night in the cell. Pltf. was brought on the following morning before a court of summary jurisdiction at D., when solr.'s letter was produced & found to contain £19 17*s.*, whereupon the magistrates ordered pltf.'s immediate release. Pltf. brought an action against deft. for false imprisonment, & the jury returned a verdict in pltf.'s favour & awarded £175 as damages for the arrest, & £175 as damages for the unlawful detention at the police station after the tender of the money :—Held : (1) the warrant was invalid by reason of the omission therefrom of the words "unless the said sum & all costs & charges be sooner paid," inasmuch as the provision in the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39), that "the payment of any sum of money directed to be paid by any order under this Act may be enforced in the same manner as the payment of money is enforced under an order of affiliation," refers not to the date when that Act was passed, but to the date when it was sought to enforce the order, & in the present case at that date the Bastardy (Forms) Amendment Order, 1921, requiring the insertion of those words in the warrant, was in force; (2) the arrest was wrongful, because the constable had not the warrant in his possession at the time he effected the arrest; (3) deft. was not protected by Criminal Justice Act, 1925 (c. 86), s. 44, for in order to obtain that protection the warrant must have been lawfully issued, & the person apprehended must have been charged with an "offence," whereas in fact the warrant was invalid & pltf. was not charged with an "offence" within Criminal Justice Act, 1925 (c. 86).—HORSFIELD v. BROWN, [1932] 1 K. 2204a. Wrong statute inserted—Later statute in similar words.]—The accused, who was a trustee under a will, was charged with having in Mar. 1916, fraudulently converted to his own use certain shares deposited with him by a co-trustee. In an affidavit filed by the accused in defence to proceedings for an account commenced against him by the co-trustee in the Ch. Div., the accused swore that he had, with the approval of his co-trustee, invested the capital in his own business. Subsequently, in his preliminary examination in bkpcy., he made admissions to the Official Receiver in regard to the disposition of the capital by him. He was indicted for fraudulent conversion as a trustee under Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 21, but the judge, on his notice being brought to the fact that that Act was not in force at the time when the offence was alleged to have been committed, allowed the indictment to be amended by the substitution of Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 80, for the later statute. The two statutes define the offence in almost precisely the same words :—Held : (1) the indictment was defective within Indictments Act, 1915 (c. 90), s. 5 (1), by reason of the wrong statute having been inserted, but in view of the fact that the offence under the earlier Act was defined in almost the same words as those used in the later Act, applt. could not have been prejudiced by the amendment, nor could injustice have been done to any defence that he might have had. The amendment was, therefore, rightly allowed ; (2) the accused was not protected from prosecution by Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 85, either in regard to acts disclosed by his affidavit or in regard to acts disclosed by his preliminary examination in bkpcy., as such disclosures were not " in consequence of any compulsory process of any court of law " ; (3) the admissions in the preliminary examination in bkpcy. were not admissions made " in any compulsory examination or deposition before any ct. on the hearing of any matter in bkcpy.," & could, therefore, be given in evidence at the trial without infringing Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 43 (3).—R. v. TUTTLE (1929), 140 L. 2219a. ——.]—Applt. was accused of having obtained sums of money by way of deposit from persons, who desired to be employed as managers of public-houses, by representing to them that he would appoint them to those positions. The indictment contained eighteen counts, relating to nine distinct offences, which were charged alternatively as obtaining sums of money by false pretences, & as larceny by a trick of the same sums. In every one of the counts relating to false pretences, the indictment as originally framed ran : " by falsely pretending that he would appoint . . . as manager." At the close of the case for the prosecution the judge thought it right to amend the counts relating to false pretences so as to read " by falsely pretending that he was in a position to appoint," etc. The jury convicted applt. on all counts :—Held : (1) the conviction for false pretences must be quashed, as the amendment of an indictment allowed by Indictments Act, 1915 (c. 90), s. 5 (1), is an amendment of a defect in form, & not the alteration & revision of the substance of a charge, such as had taken place in this case, which must necessarily prejudice accused ; (2) the conviction for larceny must be quashed, because there was no evidence of larceny, as the persons seeking employment had in each case intended to part with their money ; (3) Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 44 (3), could not apply where the indictment had charged false pretences & was up to the last moment wrong in substance.—R. v. HUGHES (1927), 136 L. 3608a. Demanding with menaces—Threatening to print or publish with intent to extort.]—The test whether a plea of autrefois convict has been established is not whether the facts relied on by the Crown are the same in the two trials, but whether the accused has been convicted of an offence which is the same, or practically the same, as that with which he is charged on the second trial. The offences of threatening to publish with intent to extort, contrary to Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 31 (2), & of uttering a letter demanding money with menaces, contrary to sect. 29 (1) (i), of the same Act, are quite distinct & separate, & the fact that the accused has already been convicted of the former will not sustain a plea of autrefois convict if he is subsequently charged with the latter, even though the two charges be supported by the same evidence.—R. v. KENDRICK & SMITH (1931), 144 L. 4816 i. Admissibility under Children Act, 1908 (c. 67), s. 30—Conditions of reception.]—Held : the purpose of sect. 30 of Children Act, 1908, was to enable a child "of tender years," age not defined by the statute, who does not, in the opinion of the ct., understand the nature of an oath, to give evidence not upon oath if, in the opinion of the ct., the child has sufficient intelligence to justify the reception of the evidence & understands the duty of speaking the truth. The sect. did not alter the previous law as to the reception of the evidence of children on oath, which was & is a question, not of age, but of the intelligence & actual mental capacity of the child witness, his sense & reason of the danger & impiety of falsehood. Strictly speaking, the objection to the reception of the child's evidence on oath should be taken, & the witness interrogated by the ct., on the voir dire, but the practice became established that the objection might be taken on facts elicited, after the person was sworn as witness, during the direct examination or even during the cross-examination, &, if it prevailed, the judge would strike out the evidence & withdraw it from the jury.—A.-G. v. O'SULLIVAN, [1930] I. (2) The notice of intention to charge the prisoner with being a habitual criminal wrongly stated the particulars of one of his previous convictions in that the sentence was for two years' imprisonment plus a period of 522 days remanet, & in the notice there was no information as to the remanet:—Held: the notice sufficiently informed the prisoner of what was alleged against him & was therefore a valid notice.—R. v. MURRAY, [1932] 1 K. 5312a. —— ——.]—Applt. was convicted of shopbreaking, & was sentenced to three years' penal servitude. He was also found to be a habitual criminal on the ground that he had been convicted on three previous occasions & that he was leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life, & he was sentenced to five years' preventive detention. In Sept. 1923 applt. was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment as a suspected person, & he was released on July 23, 1924. From Sept. to Dec. 1924 he was in honest employment. He committed the shopbreaking for which he had now been sentenced on Jan. 2, 1925:—Held: it was questionable whether, on these facts, the jury could properly have found applt. to be a habitual criminal, but if they had done so it must be on a direction to them that the burden of proof always rested on the prosecution to show that during the relevant period applt. had been leading, persistently, a dishonest or criminal life; as there were passages in the summing up which might have conveyed to the jury that, when the prosecution had gone a certain length, the burden rested on applt. to show that he had turned over a new leaf, the conviction must be quashed.—R. v. DRISCOLL (1925), 89 J. 5361a. —— ——.]—Before a sentence of preventive detention can be passed three things are requisite: first, that prisoner shall have been convicted of being a habitual criminal; secondly, that the ct. shall have taken such a view of the substantive crime of which prisoner has then been convicted as to think it right, by reason of that crime & not for any other reason, to pass a sentence of penal servitude; & thirdly, that the ct., in the exercise of its independent discretion, shall be of opinion that by reason of the criminal habits & mode of life of prisoner it is expedient for the protection of the public that he should be kept in detention for a lengthened period of years. The Govt. of the Union of South Africa, as mandatory of South-West Africa, possesses sufficient internal sovereignty to warrant a charge of high treason against an inhabitant of the mandated territory who takes up arms with hostile intent against the Govt. of that territory.—R. v. CHRISTIAN, [1924] App. D. 101.—S. The chief constable forbade deft. to lead the parade through a certain restricted area in the city, but deft. refused to obey & was arrested by the police; he then instructed his followers to enter the restricted area in defiance of the police, & they, pushing the police aside, carried the parade through the restricted area. No physical violence doing bodily harm resulted, apparently because the police realised the wisdom of yielding to a crowd of men who were unarmed & apparently harmless :—Held : deft. was a member of an assembly lawful in its inception, but unlawful in its execution, because it was determined to meet force by force & to resist the officers of the law.—R. v. PATTERSON, [1931] 3 D. L. R. 51 Mad. 91.—IND.

so. Circumstances to be considered.]—To constitute an "unlawful assembly" within sect. 87 of Criminal Code there need be no intention on the part of any member of the assembly to commit an offence, but it is the manner in which the assembly conducts itself that brings it within the purview of the sect. All the circumstances, including the conditions of the time, must be considered in determining whether a particular assembly was in the beginning or had become an unlawful one. The common purpose of the members & the likelihood of a disturbance resulting from the assembly are matters which are ordinarily not determined by direct evidence but by inference from the conduct of the meeting & all the circumstances surrounding it. Therefore, the reception of evidence that on the day before the assembly in question a circular, urging the unemployed to refuse to accept relief work & to "strike," was distributed in the city was held not to afford a valid ground of appeal from a conviction on a charge of being a member of an unlawful assembly although no connection of the accused with the circular was shown.—R. v. JONES & SHEININ, R. v. THERNES, R. v. FARBY & DWORKIN, R. v. CAMPBELL, [1931] 3 W. n i. —— Sufficiency of belief—Onus of proof.]—In Nov. 1924, M. went through a form of marriage with D. & lived with him until 1928 when they separated. In Nov. 1929, she went through a form of marriage with E., who then knew of her marriage with D. & that D. was still alive. M. & E. were prosecuted for bigamy. The defence was that D. was a married man in 1924. In May, 1915, D. married R. In Jan. 1927, she left him & disappeared & he had never since learned whether she was alive or dead. According to his evidence, she had been continuously absent for more than seven years immediately preceding his marriage with M., & it was not proved that he knew his first wife was alive at any time during those seven years :—Held : the Crown having proved the unexplained absence of D.'s first wife for seven years immediately preceding his marriage with M., & the presumption that she was then dead arising & discharging the onus which was upon the Crown, it was for the accused to rebut it; that they had not done, & therefore were rightly convicted.—R. v. MCCRORY; R. v. EDDY (1931), 55 Can. 8079 ii. —— ——.]—The Glasgow Corpn. Order Confirmation Act, 1914, s. 21, penalises the keeping for sale of indecent or obscene prints, photographs, or other representations. In a prosecution of a shopkeeper for a contravention of the section, it was proved that the accused had kept for sale a large number of photographs of nude women, which were exhibited in the windows of his shop. The magistrate, who convicted the accused, stated that he considered that, while a picture similar to those which were the subjects of the complaint might fittingly be exhibited in a public gallery, yet the indiscriminate exposure, sale, & circulation of such prints were calculated to prejudice good morals :—Held : the magistrate, in considering whether the photographs were indecent or obscene, was entitled to take into account the circumstances in which they were kept for sale; & assuming that similar pictures might fittingly be exhibited in a public gallery, yet the circumstances in which the photographs were kept for sale by the accused entitled the magistrate to hold that a contravention of the section had been committed.—MCGOWAN v. LANGMUIR, [1931] S. 8143a. —— —— By sub-lessee—Whether "lessee" within statute.]—Deft. was & had been for about seven years the lessee of premises consisting of four floors & a basement. He used the ground floor & basement as a shop in which he carried on the business of a tailor. He sub-let unfurnished the first & second floors respectively as flats to two women. These flats were approached not through the shop but by a separate entrance, & apart from his position as landlord deft. had no right to enter them & did not occupy them. It was stated by the police that the women were known to them as prostitutes, each of whom took men to her own flat. Deft. was charged for that he being the lessee of the premises unlawfully & knowingly permitted part of them, namely, the first & second floors, to be used for the purposes of habitual prostitution contrary to Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (c. 69), s. 13 (2): —Held : deft. was not the "lessee" of the flats within the sub-sect. & the charge should be dismissed.—SIVIOUR v. NAPOLITANO, [1931] 1 K. 9154a. —— Detention after receipt of remission marks.]—M. was convicted in Dec. 1925, of certain misdemeanours & sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour & twelve months' imprisonment, the sentences to run consecutively. An order was made by the ct. directing that he should be detained in prison in conformity with the sentences passed. He was first detained in Portsmouth Prison & afterwards in Pentonville Prison. In Dec. 1927, after M. had been removed to Pentonville Prison, the Governor of Portsmouth Prison indorsed on M.'s stage card the forfeiture of five remission marks, to make it agree with M.'s record. There was a dispute whether or not the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had ordered the forfeiture of those marks on May 10, 1926, & the jury differed with regard to it. As a result of the forfeiture of those five marks M. was released by the Governor of Pentonville Prison on July 21, 1928, instead of on July 20. On Aug. 2, 1928, M. brought an action against the Governors of both prisons to recover damages for his detention in prison during that one day. The jury found that the Governor of Portsmouth Prison had not acted maliciously nor with intention to injure M. & that he had not made a false statement :—Held : the Prison Rules did not confer upon M. any legal right to an earlier discharge by the obtaining of remission marks, & that therefore the action could not succeed against either of the Governors ; having regard to the findings of the jury the action could not succeed against the Governor of Portsmouth Prison ; the Governor of Pentonville Prison was protected, as he had merely acted in pursuance of the order of the ct.—MORRISS v. WINTER, [1930] 1 K. 180b. Anticipation of defence—Similar statement made by accused before arrest.]—When appct. was under remand on a charge of murdering his son, defts. published, in addition to the formal evidence which had been given before the magistrates, the following statement: "It was suggested that he met his death in an accidental manner through the family dog, Prince, knocking over a fully loaded double-barrelled gun left against the barn door." On an application to commit defts. for contempt of ct. in publishing what purported to be a statement of the defence which would be put forward & so prejudicing the defence, it appeared that a similar statement had been made by the accused man himself to the police before his arrest:—Held: in the circumstances the statement complained of did not come within the mischief against which proceedings for contempt were directed.—R. v. NEWS OF THE WORLD, EDITOR, PRINTERS & PUBLISHERS, Ex p. KITCHEN (1932), 48 T. 182a. Publication of statement that money paid into court—Libel action against newspaper—Libel Act, 1845 (c. 75), s. 2.]—(1) The amount of a payment into ct. by deft. under Libel Act, 1845 (c. 75), s. 2, amending Libel Act, 1843 (c. 96), s. 2, is not to be communicated to the jury, &, where money has been so paid in, it is contempt of ct. to publish before the trial a statement that a particular sum has been paid by deft. to pltf.'s solr., inasmuch as the publication of such a statement is calculated to prejudice the fair trial of the action.

(2) In such a case the proper procedure to be adopted by deft., who alleges that pending the trial of the action pltf. has been guilty of contempt of court, is not to apply for a rule nisi for attachment, but to proceed by notice of motion in the action.—R. v. WEALDSTONE NEWS & HARROW NEWS (EDITOR, PRINTER & PUBLISHER), HARLEY v. SHOLL (1925), 41 T. 192a. —— ——.]—A publication made with the clear intention of prejudicing the fair trial of an issue pending before a ct. is obviously a contempt of ct., & will be punished as such. But where the ct. is satisfied that there was no such intention & yet the publication might prejudice a pending trial, the ct. will, in considering whether a writ of attachment should issue, take into account the circumstances of the case, & no attachment will be granted unless (inter alia) the ct. is satisfied that the pending proceeding is a genuine proceeding, brought & intended to be prosecuted to effect its avowed purpose.—R. v. DAILY MAIL (EDITOR), Ex p. FACTOR (1928), 44 T. Appct. was committed for trial at the criminal sessions. The articles contained statements that the accused was concerned in the commission of crimes other than that with which he was charged, & that the arrest of the accused, with another man, was a "clean-up" of many recent burglaries:—Held: these statements might prejudice the fair trial of the accused, & constituted a contempt of ct.—Re THOMAS (1928), S. 224a. —— —— Appointment of receiver for debenture holders.]—Contempt of ct. may include conduct which, while it cannot directly influence a judge's mind, is calculated to affect the conduct of parties to proceedings, & the ct.'s jurisdiction to commit for contempt is not confined to cases in which its orders may directly be affected.

On the application of pltfs. in a debenture holders' action, a receiver of the shipping co. was appointed on the ground of jeopardy. A director of a co. which managed the shipping co.'s business, who was also a guarantor of debentures issued by the shipping co., authorised newspapers to publish interviews in which he adversely criticized the conduct of pltfs. in having obtained the appointment of a receiver, & he further stated that by so doing they had "smashed the goodwill & organisation of the business in a day" & that "no one in shipping circles can understand this line of conduct." The interviews did not state that the appointment was on the ground of jeopardy or that, as was the fact, the co. could not continue to carry on business unless money was immediately found. On a motion by pltfs. for an order to commit the director, & also the managing editor & the owners & publishers of the newspapers :—Held : the publication of injurious misrepresentations concerning parties to proceedings in relation to those proceedings may amount to contempt of ct., because it may cause those parties to discontinue or to compromise, & because it may deter persons with good causes of action from coming to the ct., & is thus likely to affect the course of justice.—Re William Thomas Shipping Co., Ltd., Dillon (H. 427a. —— Immaterial documents—Inclusion disapproved.]—Documents not material to an appeal should not be included in the record. If one party wishes a document to be included, but the other party considers it unnecessary, the matter should be referred to the High Ct. or its registrar. It does not follow that because unnecessary documents have been printed in India they should be included in the books for the Judicial Committee. It is the duty of the solr. in England to make a selection of the necessary documents, the other papers being ready in case they are required. In cases of doubt, the solr. should take counsel's advice, for which purpose, on application being made, a fee will be allowed.—SONATON PAL v. GALSTAUN (1927), 54 L. R. Ind. App. 118; 43 T. L. To make declaration as to validity of divorce—Granted on grounds not authorised by English law.]—Resp. & his wife, applt., who were British subjects of the Jewish religion & resident in Egypt, were divorced by the Grand Rabbinat at Alexandria in accordance with the Jewish religion, but upon grounds which would not have supported a decree for divorce according to English law. Applt. brought an action against resp. in the Supreme Ct. for Egypt for a declaration that the divorce was effectual to dissolve the marriage. The Order in Council of 1910, by which civil jurisidiction over British subjects was conferred, provided by art. 90 that " in all matters relating to marriage, inheritance, or other questions involving religious law or custom the ct. shall, in the case of persons belonging to non-Christian communities, recognise & apply the religious law or custom of the persons concerned." Art. 103 conferred " all such jurisdiction in matrimonial causes, except the jurisdiction relative to dissolution or nullity or jactitation of marriage, as for the time being belongs to the High Ct. in England " :—Held : applt. was entitled to the declaratory decree which she sought.—SASSON v. SASSON, [1924] A. 956b. —— —— To try action for damages for breach of contract—Breach in England.]—By the Ottoman Order, 1910, the jurisdiction of the Supreme Ct. thereby established extends, as regards Egypt, to, so far as material : " (i) British subjects, as herein defined, within the limits of this Order. (ii) The property & all personal & proprietary rights & liabilities within the said limits of British subjects, whether the said subjects are within the said limits or not." Rules of ct. made under the order contain a provision for substituted service, but none for service out of the jurisdiction. Applt., a British subject resident in England, contracted in England to buy from resp., who was resident in Egypt, a concession granted by the Egyptian Govt. in connection with irrigation, & for the employment of resp. in Egypt. Applt. repudiated the contracts by a cable despatched from England. Resp. issued a writ in the Supreme Ct. for Egypt claiming damages from applt. for breach of the contracts, & obtained an order for substituted service in Egypt :—Held : the cable repudiating the contracts having been despatched in England, the breach took place there, & the Supreme Ct. had no jurisdiction in the case.—MARTIN v. STOUT, [1925] A.
